ONTARIO LAND BILL

TORONTO (CP) — Major new programs in land-use and law reform were promised today by the provincial government at the opening of the third session of the 29th Ontario legislature.

In the 21-page speech from the throne, read by Lt.-Gov. W. Ross Macdonald, the government promised legislation to ensure that good farmland is retained for agriculture, to preserve the Niagara escarpment, expand activity in forest management including regeneration of cut-over lands, and for a 75-mile-long parkway green belt from Dundas, near Hamilton, to Oshawa on the east.

The speech also pledged reforms of the Ontario Municipal Board, Ontario Hydro and the courts, including abolition of the grand-jury system and a proposal to permit legal clerks to prosecute minor traffic offences.

Troops Pour South

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today that all the information he could glean on his trip to Southeast Asia "tends to confirm" that thousands of North Vietnamese troops have infiltrated the South.

He told the Commons this is one reason that Canada wants the supervisory commission to work in such a way that this can be determined as a matter of fact. But the commission, of which Canada is a member, had not been asked to observe, or given permission to observe, the reported infiltration.

Meanwhile, a fierce and bloody battle between North and South Vietnamese troops appeared to be raging today at Tong Le Chan base camp 50 miles north of Saigon.

South Vietnamese government spokesman Lt.-Col. Le Trung Hien said the situation at the besieged camp was "critical" and that no aid had reached the 500 rangers trapped in the outpost.

Huen said earlier the South Vietnamese would have to stage a counterattack to relieve the battered troops if the peacekeeping force did not take some action.

Hien said 12 rangers have been killed and 61 wounded since the Communists surrounded the base last week. Except for a few wounded who were evacuated early in the attack, most of the injured men are still in the camp.

South Vietnamese medical helicopters have not been able to evacuate the wounded because of heavy ground fire.

Hien said the situation was not as serious at Rach Bap, a militia base about 30 miles closer to Saigon. About 100 South Vietnamese are also surrounded there. The attack at Rach Bap, which started the same time as the move against Tong Le Chan, has left eight dead and 18 wounded, including the company commander.

An international observer team was unable to investigate allegations of sieges at the two camps today because it could not get clearance from Viet Cong representatives.

Sources from the International Commission of Control and Supervision said an ICCS team at Bien Hoa outside Saigon received orders by courier today to investigate reports of fighting around Tong Le Chan and Rach Bap.

Whitney-Griffiths with a dead sheep

Dogs Decimate Flock

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

When William Whitney-Griffiths woke up Monday morning he was the owner of one dying sheep. The rest of his flock was dead.

Blood-stained mutilated carcasses lay scattered about his farm — two on the lower pasture, four behind the house, one in the barn. Two others had been shot and buried.

There's one left. She's in the barn — dried blood spattered on her wool, refusing to eat and due to lamb in two weeks. Whitney-Griffiths says she probably won't make it.

Whitney-Griffiths, 87, has been raising sheep on his 25-acre Metchosin farm for 60 years. He's seen the dismembered limbs and ripped throats before.

Dogs marauding at night have taken about 60 of his sheep in the past. But this time he might be beaten.

"After 60 years of sheep all I've got is the one in the barn. I've got one sheep left and she'll die. I was so proud of them. And after all these years, they cleaned me out.

"They were all due to lamb in two weeks. We only just trimmed their eyes yesterday so they'd be able to see better. They got at them last night or early this morning."

Whitney-Griffiths' 12-year-old grandson, Gordon, discovered the dead sheep on his way to school.

"My daughter-in-law told me in the house here. She came in, closed the door and said 'you'd better sit down. I've got some bad news.'

"I just couldn't believe it."

He stood up, walked over to the whiskey, and took a couple of good stiff belts.

Apart from Whitney-Griffiths' old farmhouse, there are two cottages on the farm.

"That old ewe in the barn there . . . she goes to each cottage every day and they feed her. I don't think she'll last."

Nobody saw or heard the dogs.

"These were supposed to have been, from the marks we found, two big dogs and a little one. One gets the rear end and another takes the head. Once they've got 'em down they just go at the throat and rip it out.

"But they're just killing for killing. It's not as if they're starving."

Whitney-Griffiths says each sheep would have sold for about $75. A lamb would sell for $30 to $40. He would have had 15 to 20 lambs in early April.

It'd cost "easily $750" to start a new flock.

"I don't want to quit. The son will carry on. I don't know how much longer I'll last with a few more shocks like this.

U.K. Keeps Control Of Ulster

Times News Services

LONDON — The British government announced today official proposals for the future of Northern Ireland in which Ulster will remain part of the United Kingdom and the Roman Catholic minority will be guaranteed full civil rights.

Northern Ireland is also to get a new 80-member legislative assembly. Elections will be held as soon as possible.

The plan was announced under intense security precautions in a long-awaited white paper setting out the government's plans for restoring peace to violence-ridden Ulster.

The new assembly to be elected will replace the old (Protestant-dominated) parliament at Stormont suspended a year ago when Britain imposed direct rule. Elections will be by proportional representation.

Northern Ireland's link with Britain will be retained as long as the majority of its 1.5 million population wishes, the paper said.

This means in effect that there would be no pushing of the Protestant majority into involuntary union with the Republic.

TO RETAIN POWER

Ultimate power over legislation for Northern Ireland will remain with the British Parliament, the white paper said.

A secretary of state for Northern Ireland will continue to hold a seat in the British cabinet and to exercise executive responsibility for law and order.

William Whitelaw, 52, has held this job for the past year.

After the election, the British government proposes to hold a conference between representatives of Northern Ireland and the Irish republic.

It indicates a recognition that the Irish republic has a legitimate interest in the affairs of the northern counties.

"The proposals are unacceptable and we shall now set about making them unworkable," said William Craig, chairman of the Ulster Loyalist Council.

Brian Faulkner, leader of the Unionist Party and last Northern Ireland prime minister, said, "there can be no snap judgment until the paper has been studied. But I welcome the decision-making coming back to the people where it belongs."

"The IRA is not interested in any paper solution whether it is white, green, or orange," Faulkner said.

There was no advance notice of the publication date. This was to foil any attempt at terrorist bomb attacks.

In anticipation of the publication of the white paper, Belfast grocers reported a run on their packaged food stocks, saying people feared an explosion of violence might close stores.

British commanders sent reinforcements into the streets and doubled troop strength at some posts along the so-called "peace line" separating Belfast's Protestant and Catholic neighborhoods.

An army spokesman reported seven shooting incidents in the province over the past 24 hours, five of them between troops and gunmen.

Still, they said, the violence apparently has eased considerably since the weekend.

THE 'FORGOTTEN SICKNESS'

"Alcoholism is the forgotten sickness — the very real problem in our society today," says Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace says: "Alcoholism must be recognized as a medical problem and it far exceeds in gravity narcotic drug addiction."

And Cathy Perkins, director Victoria branch, B.C. Alcoholism Foundation says the rate of alcoholism in people over 20 years of age has increased by 50 per cent in the past 10 years.

"We must have a plan to tell them what is happening to them and what will happen if they don't break the pattern," she said.

Starting in today's Times on Page 19 is the first of a four-article series on alcoholism by Victoria writer Pat Murphy.

The series gives a picture of the vast social and economic costs rung up by the age-old problem of alcohol addiction and also raises the point that conversely, society has not yet resolved its debt to the alcoholic — mainly to recognize the affliction as illness and take steps to help the individual alcoholic make his or her adjustment to life.

GOVERNMENT COST UP EIGHT-FOLD

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of running the federal government has increased eight-fold from 1942 to 1972 and the number of federal employees has more than tripled, the Commons was advised Monday.

There were 83,781 federal public servants in 1942 compared to 273,537 in 1972.

It cost $1.85 billion to run the government in 1942 and $14.84 billion in 1972.

The figures were provided by Herb Breau (L-Gloucester), parliamentary secretary for trade, in response to a writtten question from John Reynolds (PC-Burnaby-Richmond-Delta).

ITT Admits Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — A company official confirmed today that International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. tried to get U.S. government action to threaten President Salvadore Allende with economic collapse in Chile.

"He had stolen our property without compensation—or they had said they were going to," William R. Merriam, ITT vice-president explained to a Senate foreign relations subcommittee.

Merriam testified that ITT sought to apply pressure in 1971 through the White House office of presidential adviser Dr. Henry A. Kissinger and the state department to suspend U.S. foreign aid to Chile, deny International Bank loans and apply other economic sanctions.

The objective, he said, was to get the government of Chile to pay for expropriated property, which in the case of ITT involved the Chile Telephone Co.

Merriam said his company made the objective explicit to the state department 25 times but "they didn't do it."

He acknowledged that a memorandum from a company official making 18 suggestions for U.S. government action represented the company's desire. "If Allende was faced with economic collapse he might be more agreeable to pay for expropriated property," Merriam explained.

He acknowledged that he, as head of ITT's Washington office in 1970-71, headed an ad hoc committee of other multinational corporation Washington representatives with similar objectives in Chile. The other companies he identified as Anaconda and Kennicott Copper, W. R. Grace, Kaiser Chemical and Ralston Purina.

Merriam testified that he exchanged information on the political situation in Chile in 1970 with the head of the Central Intelligence Agency's Latin American section.

U.S. Banks Must Explain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government has summoned six of the nation's largest banks to appear here Thursday and explain their raising of interest rates for prime business loans

Led by the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York, the banks announced increases in the prime interest rate Monday from 6¼ to 6¾. Past increases have normally been in increments of ⅛ or ¼ point.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and also head of the committee on interest and dividends, which is part of the government's wage-price control system, quickly challenged the increases, saying it was not clear they complied with government criteria set last month.

Burns asked the banks to bring information on their costs and interest rate policies, particularly with regard to loans to small business firms, home buyers and consummers.

NEWS BRIEFS

Iran Takes Oil

TEHRAN (AP) — Iran formally took over from foreign operators today the country's multi-billion-dollar oil industry.

Kuwait Incident

KUWAIT (UPI) — Iraqui troops attacked and seized one Kuwaiti border post and shelled another today in what Arab observers called the worst such incident between the two countries since Kuwait gained its independence in 1961.

Block Removed

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (UPI) — Leaders of the American Indian Movement formally requested a recall of their tribal chief Monday, a major development that could help resolve the three-week armed occupation of this tiny hamlet on the sprawling Pine Ridge Indian reservation.

Candidates Quit

ANKARA (UPI) — The two main candidates in Turkey's presidential election withdrew from the race today leaving the way open for an extension of President Cevdet Sunay's term for two years.

New Panama Treaty

PANAMA (AP) — The United States told the UN Security Council today it is ready to conclude promptly a new treaty on the Panama Canal Zone.

3 Feet of Water Covers Streets

MONTREAL (CP) — A state of emergency was declared Monday night in Lachenaie, a community just north of Montreal, after the bordering Milles Iles River overflowed, causing severe flooding.

Lachenaie Mayor Edouard Sarrazen said the state of emergency was called after consultation with his administration.

"The ice shifted after supper and the water rose quickly," he said. "If it shifts again things will get worse."

Civil protection crews were sent in to help and "already people are being evacuated by truck because the water is too deep for them to use their cars," he said.

The mayor said he has requested help from the Canadian Armed Forces in evacuating residents to a high school where emergency accomodations have been set up.

A Quebec Provincial Police office said many streets were covered with as much as three feet of water.

In Ontario almost 4,000 acres of prime farmland 25 miles southwest of Chatham remained submerged today after water poured through a 45-foot gap in the Baptiste Creek dike system in weekend flooding.

As brisk winds continued on Lake Erie, fears were expressed that considerable damage might be caused on Pelee Island, off Essex County.

Prof. Paul Vandall, geography specialist at the University of Windsor, described the island's position as precarious. It has 300 permanent residents.

Meanwhile, the federal government and Ontario governments have discussed aid to thousands of flood victims along Lakes St. Clair, Erie and Ottawa.

$3.5M Paid In Mercury Poisoning

KUMAMOTO, Japan (AP)— The Kumamoto district court today ordered the Chisso chemical firm to pay $3.54 million to the families of 67 persons who died after eating fish contaminated by pollutants the company had dumped.

Another 259 persons who were affected but didn't die are expected to sue for damages.

The company's president said earlier that Chisso would accept the court's judgment and would not appeal.

The court said mercurious wastes from the company's plant flowed into Minamoto Bay and persons who ate the contaminated fish suffered a form of mercury poisoning known as Minamoto Disease. The symptoms include paralysis of the limbs, impairment of speech and hearing and disorders of the nervous system.

The awards ranged from $49,000 to $168,000.

'EXOTIC-TYPE' GUNS FACE BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang Monday said the semi-automatic M-1 carbine and possibly other "quasi-machine guns" as well as the "more exotic types of firearms" soon might be banned.

The M-1 is the weapon which killed a shopper here in a weekend robbery.

Lang said in an interview he had asked department officials to investigate all weapons to determine which should be restricted or prohibited. But he said that he was not prepared to recommend restrictions on rifles and shotguns.

"The advantages that would be gained by requiring registration of shotguns or rifles used for hunting purposes would be outweighed by the disadvantages," he said. "The result could be that innocent citizens would find themselves violating the law."

Make Your Own Rolls!

LONDON (AP) — Any multimillionaire who wants go one better than his neighbor gets his chance next week. Instead of buying just another Rolls-Royce, he could buy the entire company and make his own.

Rolls-Royce Motors is up for sale.

The prospectus of the company which claims to build the world's best motor car will be published next week by London merchant banker N. N. Rothschild who will then invite bids, signed and sealed, from interested parties.

The giant Rolls-Royce aerospace and automobile empire crashed into virtual bankruptcy in 1971, broken by a massive fixed price contract to build engines for America's Lockheed TriStar Airliner.

The British government rescued the military and aerospace divisions from the ruins by nationalizing them into a new company called Rolls-Royce Ltd.

The automobile and diesel engine divisions carried on working under the managership of an official receiver, on whose behalf Rothschild is staging its auction.

Last year Rolls-Royce Motors made a profit of about $7.5 million at current exchange rates, with an output of some 2,800 cars and a turnover of $125 million.

Rothschild is putting a reserve price on its prestige-laden package. Business experts are predicting the price may be as much as $100 million.

But there is a snag.

Foreign bidders are not exactly being blocked. But the legal standing of the thoroughly British Rolls-Royce marque prevents the name itself being used by any foreign company.

There would appear to be little attraction to the foreign corporate millionaire in having a garage full of Rolls-Royces when he had to call them something else.

BENNETT WON'T RUN AGAIN

Former premier W. A. C. Bennett said Monday he will retire from politics and go back into business.

He did not say when his retirement would come.

However, he said in a speech to the convention of Vancouver Island chambers of commerce at The Empress:

"There is no way I will be a candidate in the next provincial election — even if it came tomorrow."

He said he will go back into the business world, into some form of merchandising.

Bennett still owns several hardware stores in the B.C. interior.

He specifically denied rumors he was using his attack on the provincial government land bill as a springboard for a political comeback.

Bennett said he would not run for re-election as party leader and would not be a candidate for provincial office.

When asked later if he planned to step down as South Okanagan MLA before his four-year term expires, he replied: "Don't fence me in."

He repeated he would not be a candidate when the provincial election was called.

Cars 'Melted' In Crash

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Bodies cremated in melted-down slabs of metal that once were cars created impossible problems to provincial police today as they continued trying to identify eight of at least 12 persons killed in a nightmare chain collision of more than 30 vehicles.

Some may never be identified — only bones were found.

Police were not even sure how many were in at least seven cars crushed beyond recognition at 5:30 p.m., Sunday, in a fiery wreckage as gasoline tanks exploded and a truck-trailer load of lumber toppled over on them during a blizzard.

It happened seven miles south of here on southbound Highway 400. Forty-three were injured—15 admitted to hospital.

"These cars justs melted as if they were in a melting pot — flesh and bone can't stand up to that," Barrie Coroner Dr. William Farrington said Monday night. Dental work, spectacles, licence records and wallets were used in some identification attempts. Body and serial numbers of cards were checked.

Tourist Money Available If Regions Share Cost

The provincial government is willing to supply funds for Vancouver Island tourist promotion if regional districts will share the cost, Vancouver Island chamber industrial committee chairman Joseph Garner said today.

He told a convention of Vancouver Island chambers of commerce at The Empress he has been urged by the government to get regional district support for a chamber plan to establish a co-ordinating committee for the whole island.

The committee, if established, would finance tourist bureaus and co-ordinate industrial planning.

Garner said the only known opposition has come from Cowichan Valley regional district and the matter would be reviewed with them again within a month. Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife is a member of the chamber's committee investigating the proposal.

Quaife said provincial ministers, who he said he could not name, have told him grants will be forthcoming in some form to regional districts for tourist promotion, if the idea goes ahead.

Earlier he had named Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich and Trade and Commerce Minister Alex Macdonald as giving moral support to the proposal.

The new committee, if formed, would be funded by levies on regional districts. First-year budget would be about $230,000 plus grants, if any, from the provincial government.

About $100,000 would be levied against the Capital Region.

Only dissent today came from Campbell River alderman W. W. Balkie who wondered aloud what future there would be for mayors and aldermen if regional districts continued to grow in power.

He said regional districts and school boards were taking a large portion of property taxes and now tourist promotion was also becoming a charge against property, according to the proposal.

He told the convention there was a grassroots feeling among municipal councils that they were becoming obsolete.

Garner said the cost of the plan would be one-fifth of one mill if regional districts had to pay all costs, or one-tenth of one mill if costs were shared 50-50 with the provincial government.

Queen's Help Sought

A group on prominent citizens of the Langley area of the Fraser Valley have sent telegrams to the lieutenant-governor, Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener and Queen Elizabeth II asking their intercession over Bill 42.

Headed by the organizer, Dr. H. S. Nators, and including Mayor George Preston of Langley district, Alderman P. Y. Porter of Langley city, and former Langley MLA Hunter Vogel, the telegram asks them to consider withholding royal assent for the legislation.

The telegram said the government's Land Commission Act "destroys hundreds of years of our history connected so directly with our struggle for individual rights in the concept of individual freedom to the enjoyment of property.

"We beg that you intervene on our behalf. Our very basic human rights are negated by this act of the legislature. God Save the Queen."

It also said the 15 persons whose names were attached "and many hundreds more of desperately concerned citizens . . . pleaded for your support and ask you to do all in your power to help preserve our basic freedoms."

38 Nude Men Storm Boutique

MUNICH (UPI) — A boutique owner placed advertisements in Munich newspapers saying he would outfit his first five customers from head to foot, provided they showed up nude.

Thirty-eight nude men stormed the newly-opened boutique Monday.

The boutique owner, who said he did not expect even one man to take advantage of the offer, kept his promise and presented the other 33 nudes with pants and socks.

The first prospective customers began arriving before dawn and camped in front of the boutique in sleeping bags in subzero temperatures.

Late-comers jumped out of their cars and ran into the boutique shortly after opening time. They got an unwelcome bonus police summonses for blocking the street with their cars.

HE'D RATHER QUIT

DELTA (CP) — Ald. Bernard Moore resigned from municipal council Monday rather than comply with the provincial government's proposed Disclosure Act.

On Friday, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald introduced a bill requiring full public disclosure by MLAs, certain municipal politicans and school trustees. Those failing to comply will be liable to a fine of up to $10,000, six months in jail, or both.

"This bill works on the principle you are guilty until proven innocent," Moore said.

He particularly attacked the section of the bill requiring disclosure of holdings of the spouse and minor children.

Moore said as a horticulturist and landscape consultant he charges fees but he said he performs those services free for the municipality.

Ass't Engineer Resigns Post

John Cowlin, 47, assistant municipal engineer for Saanich since 1960, has resigned to enter private consulting in Greater Victoria.

Cowlin said today his resignation was accepted at a closed session of council Monday night following the public meeting.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said the vacancy will be advertised internally and externally for commencement about April 15.

"I am hopeful the position can be filled just as quickly as is practicable," Curtis said.

EXTRA ENGINEER

The mayor also announced a decision to seek an additional professional engineer for Saanich senior staff to be known as subdivision engineer which also will be advertised shortly.

Curtis said the pressure on professional staff had grown to a point where the new post was justified.

Cowlin said he had been employed in Saanich 19 years and had been considering leaving to do private consulting work before he got much older: "It's something you can't do in your 50s."

He said he had been dealing with developers and subdividers for more than a decade and was in a position to offer special services in connection with sewers, drains and roads for subdivisions and major construction projects.

Despite the land freeze and uncertainty about land controls, Cowlin said "it seems an opportune time" to go into practice considering the volume of applications being handled. "For every subdivision plan before us, there's three or four coming," he said.

During the illness of former engineer Neville Life and after his death in 1971, Cowlin was acting municipal engineer for about a year until the appointment of Bob Daye a year ago.

Victoria-born Cowlin is a 1952 civil engineering graduate of University of B.C.

8-WEEK DELAY IN COURT CASES

Court cases in Victoria provincial and traffic courts are being delayed by an average of eight weeks, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Monday.

Macdonald was replying to a question on the order paper from Hugh Curtis (PC — Saanich-and-the-Islands). He filed a written answer which said there is a backlog of cases in which accused persons are not heard on the day or the day after their not guilty pleas are heard.

The eight-week figure is "a rough average," Macdonald said.

However, a new trial courtroom opened Monday and is expected to relieve the pressure.

. . . SHEEP

"I'm going to try and ask the government, they want to help the farmer. I need half a dozen but I don't think they'll give them to me.

"But it's two years before you get any return. I'll be 90 by then. I don't know. I feel sometimes like chucking the idea of bothering about them. They're such a worry but I like a few animals running around."

Farmers who lose their stock to dogs are paid $30 a sheep under the Sheep Protection Act.

"You can sue the dog owners but the government will give you $30. The owners never pay so you're better off not even finding them."

Under the same act the farmer is authorized to kill any dog that "worries" his sheep. In Whitney-Griffiths' 60 years he's seen only two dogs destroyed and they were killed by their owner.

What can a sheep farmer do about vicious dogs?

"Not a damn thing unless you lock your sheep up every night. My whole place is fenced but they get through the fence or jump over it. Good God, I can't keep them locked up all the time.

"You can't do a damn thing."

Calling the police is virtually useless.

"There's nothing we can do," said Sgt. Ralph Browne of Colwood RCMP. "We can't spend all our time looking for dogs."

Editors Arrested

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — Newspaper editors were among the latest anti-government suspects arrested today under the state of emergency clamped on Cambodia following the weekend air attack on President Lon Nol's palace.

Security Stepped Up

ROME (Reuter) — Police stepped up security precautions at Rome's Fiumicino Airport today after the discovery of a small arsenal of light machine-guns, bombs and ammunition in four suitcases.

NDP 'Proud' of Ocean Falls Deal

By BRIAN BUTTERS
And PAUL MOSS

Resources Minister Bob Williams lashed out at the Social Credit opposition in the legislature Monday for criticizing the government's purchase of the coastal town of Ocean Falls.

He accused the Socreds of ignoring the needs of areas of the province such as Ocean Falls and said it was not surprising that the New Democratic Party collected most of the seats in the northwestern sector of the province in the Aug. 30 election.

The minister said the Socreds were guilty of "baffle-gab" and of "promising jobs and never ever producing."

Under Social Credit, the northwest sector had been allowed to "drift," to "stagnate," he said.

To heavy heckling from the Socred benches, Williams said the "gradual hardening of the arteries of the former administration plugged first in northwestern B.C."

In defence of the government move, Premier Barrett said his participation in the arrangements for the Ocean Falls purchase "was one of the proudest moments I have had as premier."

"We consider jobs and the resource industry to e paramount," he said. "We are not prepared to let this town die as Social Credit would have."

Williams said co-operation between the former government and the federal government did not exist, because the Socreds were too concerned with making "a few points" in their political game with Ottawa.

He said the deal with Crown Zellerbach for purchase by the government of Ocean Falls was not concluded until late Friday afternoon. The house had risen for the day at 1 p.m. Friday, he said, which gave him no opportunity to inform the house of the developments until Monday afternoon.

To a question from Ed Smith (SC—North Peace), Williams said the price of $1 million for Ocean Falls was not overly generous, as Smith implied.

The government could probably get at least $1 million in scrap metal value for Ocean Falls, he said, not even taking into account the numerous structures the government has acquired.

He said 87 people have already indicated since the Friday announcement that they plan to stay in Ocean Falls to work in the new mill operation and 10 others have said they will move back to the coastal community after having moved away.

More people plan to stay through the first six months of the mill's operation, Williams said.

Liberal leader David Anderson questioned the apparent delay of several months which he said occurred between the time the NDP govbernment took office and t he time negotiations with Crown Zellerbach started for the purchase.

Anderson wanted to know why the government had waited until only two weeks before the town was due to be shut down before stepping in with the purchase.

During that delay period, many people had lost money through liquidation of their assets and moving costs, he said.

Williams said while the plight of Ocean Falls registered on the public consciousness over a period of some months, there is still no general appreciation of the serious problems facing many other towns and communities in northern B.C.

The future of such centres as Prince Rupert, Terrace and Kitimat is heavily dependent on transactions "in the market place," but the government wants to ensure that such transactions reflect social responsibility.

"We want those communities protected and we will not see companies make decisions unilaterally," Williams said.

Socred Smith said no one could predict with any certainty that the future of Ocean Falls under control of a government agency is going to be any better than it was under Crown Zellerbach—unless the government plans some form of continuing subsidy on the operation.

He said the government plans to operate a plant that is old, wasteful and inefficient "just to supply a few jobs."

Premier Barrett pounced on that statement, shouting "We'll remember that: just a few jobs."

Smith continued: "We might find that the number of jobs retained could very well be the most expensive jobs we have ever created in the province."

The biggest benefit from the move, he said, seems to be that it satisfies the "ego" of the NDP government. "It certainly satisfies the party position that a socialist government must get into business, must control, must take over."

He said if he had been a former worker and resident in Ocean Falls he would now feel reluctant to tie his future to a community which could have a very short life, despite the "artificial props" used by the government.

In reply to Anderson, Williams said the reason negotiations on the purchase took so long was that time was related to price, and the price was affected by the time involved.

Williams was heavily criticized by Opposition members for making the government's purchase of Ocean Falls public before informing the house.

Liberal MLA Pat McGeer (L-Vancouver Point Grey), Liberal leader Anderson and Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett all rose during Monday's question period and attacked Williams for not making an announcement to the house before releasing details of the purchase to the press.

McGeer accused Williams of making the purchase on behalf of a crown corporation which does not even exist and said the decision commits the minister to expenditures for which he has not yet received legislative approval.

McGeer attempted to have the house conduct an emergency debate on the subject but was over-ruled by Speaker Gordon Dowding since Williams' estimates were to be debated the same afternoon.

Out of the mould comes hull of Sooke Post

Second Sooke Post Is First of Her Kind

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

She's the first of her kind in North America.

Like a butterfly emerging from a chrysalis the powerful-looking hull of the 64½-foot Sooke Post has juest been taken out of her mould by Philbrook's Shopyards Ltd.

This is the largest boat in North America to be made from this type of mould.

Being constructed by the Sidney yard at a cost of $260,000, she is part of the fleet of ships being built for the federal department of fisheries under their replacement program.

She has a seaworthy 17-foot beam, will gross 35 tons on completion and will be capable of a crusing speed of 17 knots. Her top speed is being kept "under wraps" by the department.

She's another of the designs to come off the drawing board of well-known naval architect Biil Garden, who now lives at Todd Landing in semi-retirement.

Fisheries official Capt. 'Mitch' Gay of Vancouver said she will be stationed at Queen Charlotte City in the Queen Charlotte Islands, replacing her namesake, the 27-year-old Sooke Post, which began her career as a supply and picket boat for the armed forces.

To be used on inshore and moderate offshore patrols, she will carry a crew of four and a fisheries officer.

She will be launched June 15 and should be in service by July.

Philbrook's manager Ted Hopkins said two private bidders are now negotiating to have boats built from the mould, which cost more than $40,000 to make.

Hopkins is enthusiastic about the design which combines the seaworthiness of a displacement hull with a speed usually associated with other type hulls.

With the first of her kind being built for the fisheries department, Hopkins feels she could also prove a winner in the fishing industry itself.

"This could open an entire new field in the fishing business," he said. "She would be ideal as a high-speed seiner. Most seiners are in the 50 to 70 feet range and the first boat in the area naturally has the best opportunity.

"She has all the qualities of a displacement boat and can get there a hell of a lot faster."

Around the bay from Philbrook's, two more fisheries patrol boats are reaching completion at Canoe Cove Marina Ltd.

These are the 52-foot sister ships Babine Post and Stuart Post, which will each carry three-man crews plus a fisheries officer.

Due to be ready for handover to the department in a week or so, the Babine Post will be stationed at Kitimat, patrolling the Butedale area, while her sister ship will operate out of Alert Bay.

Gay said the updating program calls for the Victoria-based 120-footers Howey and Laurier to be replaced, too, within the next five years.

Gay said the 110-foot Tanu, built at Yarrows in 1968, still has many good years of service in her yet.

Although the new vessels joining the fisheries' fleet are all capable of higher speeds than their predecessors, Gay said this is not a feature of prime importance in apprehending foreign ships caught fishing within our limits.

"Everybody wants more and more speed," he said, "but when you can see for 50 miles on radar it isn't that important."

Mr. Connally's Good Neighbor

It was only a few months ago that Mr. John B. Connally, as U.S. treasury secretary, was giving Canada a rough time in its trade and balance-of-payments relationship with the United States. He adopted a gruff approach to Canadian requests and needs and riled many a Canadian businessman and politician. There was an audible sigh of relief in Ottawa when, after President Nixon's re-election, Mr. Connally left his office. Yesterday, Mr. Connally received a standing ovation from businessmen at a Toronto meeting when he urged closer economic ties in North America to offset a similar trend in Europe.

In a sense, Mr. Connally's plea was a sound one for all nations to "put down this wave of nationalism that is sweeping the world" in order to prevent political boundaries from controlling the flow of money, material and ideas. But viewed as a new approach to the continental policy, which would see Canadian and United States natural resources pooled for joint use on a basis of proven need, the idea presents obvious dangers to Canada.

A world-wide loosening of bars to economic interchange is one thing; a move toward converting Canada into a storehouse of raw materials — energy fuels, metals, wood products, even pure water — for its aggressive and more highly industrialized neighbor, is quite another.

If the key to Canada's future economic progress is development of our natural wealth, that future will never be realized if we sell off all our raw materials to provide power and employment for the United States merely because that country is a decade or two ahead of us in utilization. It is another way, in fact, of saying that when the United States has used up its natural resources — and that is happening rapidly — it will use up ours too.

There would be nothing illegal or evil in such a program on our neighbor's part. But it is a matter of evolutionary life for Canada to resist such a take-over and exploit our natural wealth in terms of our own domestic development.

Mr. Connally said that "a country that husbands everything it has . . . must be prepared to consume everything it produces" — a blunt suggestion, if one wishes to interpret it so, that if we do not sell our raw materials to the United States we will not be allowed to sell that country our manufactured products either.

The man who in August, 1971, devised President Nixon's economic policy of higher tariffs on goods sold to the United States, has changed his tune when he says in Toronto that "it would be tragic indeed if men of goodwill are so hidebound by nationalism that they cannot explore new pathways, or even express the hope that a political boundary line should not control the flow of money, materials and ideas for all time to come."

It would not take many Connallys in Washington to place Canada in a very serious predicament. The full weight of a giant industrial power, friendly but determined to obtain what it needs for its economic life, could be brought to bear on this country, and the historic hewers-of-wood and drawers-of-water bugaboo could become a reality. That would be a way of life, all right, and perhaps even a comfortable one while the raw materials lasted. But afterwards Canada could become a shell of a country with a low standard of living, having failed to develop to its potential while it had the basic resources to do so.

One gets an uncomfortable feeling that Mr. Connally comes to Toronto in something of the spirit of a child looking into a candy store window. It is essential that we have firm and far-ranging plans for our own development if we are to survive.

Preparing for the Fire War

The blustery rain squalls of March are scarcely the time to focus public attention on the danger of forest fires in this province when the drying days of summer convert timber to tinder. Yet it is reassuring to note preparations being made by the British Columbia Forest Service to meet the hazard when it occurs.

Particular attention has been given to the danger of operations in or near the woods during the period of risk. Special regulations have been laid down for all industrial camps, including land clearing, engineering construction or industrial activity utilizing manpower or equipment as well as for any logging, lumbering or sawmilling operations specifically related to wood products. Such activity will henceforth require the use by operators of instruments to determine the Canadian Forest Fire Weather Index on a daily basis and in keeping with Forest Service standards, as well as extended periods for watchmen after operations have been halted because of fire hazard.

In addition, pay scales for fire fighters have substantially increased with the intent of attracting personnel able to do a competent job.

The provincial service is apparently adapting an old slogan for its annual battle against fire: In time of peace, prepare for war. The preparations should be appreciated.

"... do you have anything for a mild recurrence of an absolute horror and dread of what lies ahead on the municipal, provincial, federal, hemispheric and world levels ... ?"

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

The Roberts House

"I don't know why they switched," Miss Jean Roberts told me.

There are so many "theys" in this world of today that one gets confused, as Miss Jean Roberts must be, after being promised that "they" would give the name "The Roberts House" to the building that is being erected on very special ground —the Roberts homestead on Young St. for over 80 years.

A promise is a promise is a promise. All Miss Roberts' pupils, I know, would be 100 per cent behind her, to have that promise fulfilled. She was, in her sweet, dignified way a very marvellous teacher, asking so little, but giving so much.

Now, in her retirement years, to have a precious promise broken — why, Mr. William Henderson and Company? We don't think you give much assurance to anyone when a promise can so easily be forgotten.

Aren't Douglas Street, Mt. Douglas, Douglas Hotel, Mt. Douglas Park and monuments to the pioneer gentleman, enough for the memory of one person?

Rally around, South Park, George Jay, Victoria West, Goldstream and Maple Bay former students. Let's do something for the marvellous teacher we knew so well: Miss Jean Roberts.

Send a letter to the Times to show your support. Among the South Park pupils were Claude Bissell, Hugh Stubbs, Alan Pendray, Robert White, his sister Francis Lamb, Viola Stewart, Janet Wilson, Doris McMorran, Marjorie Speed, Allan Le Marquand, Jack Barnes, the Medeley boys, Harry Whitehouse and many, many more.

Miss Roberts would like a reunion of all former students, sometime in June in Beacon Hill Park. — (Elsie Whitehouse) Mrs. Philip Knowles, No. 202 — Marquee Court, 2095 Oak Bay Ave.

Birthright

I would like to commend Mr. Laurence on his very fine letter on "Land" March 7.

Land, in a just society, would be regarded as the birthright of all, just as are the seas and sky, and should be no more regarded as private property than the very air we breathe. Exclusive use of land, yes, provided society is fully recompensed for the value received; the more valuable the plot of land, the greater the annual rent paid to society.

Too many in Tokyo

For who creates the value that accrues to land? For the answer to this, it is informative to turn to the article on page 29 of the same paper "Too Many People in Tokyo". A small plot in the centre of Tokyo bought in 1948 for $250 is now worth, unimproved, half a million dollars! With the growth of the community with resulting increased demand for land, the value increases, in this case nearly half a million, for a plot of 1-20 of an acre! The growth of community has created the value; to the community should go this "unearned increment" in the form of annual rent or unimproved land tax.

Henry George, the American philosopher-economist of the 19th century, saw this and expressed it very clearly in his books "Progress and Poverty," "The Science of Political Economy" and others.

Why have these ideas been so sadly neglected It is easy to see the terrible threat these ideas pose to the most powerful vested interest group in the world, that of property owners. Greed and self-interest, even if benighted, have so far in most countries won over ideas of "justice" and "equality," with the agonizing results so visible in our strife-torn, unhappy world. Is it too late to change? Let us give our new government a chance. It shows signs of leading us in the right direction.—Ann Barrow, 777 St. Patrick St.

Case Histories

Recent articles on heroin were very interesting but I don't know if they would be much help in preventing young people from trying heroin. In fact they might encourage some people to try to get into the business.

I would like to see some real case histories and pictures of the tragic lives of those who are hooked. This might help to stop others from starting to take drugs.

I think we should adopt the Japanese method here. Jail for two weeks and no drugs for users, and life imprisonment for pushers or for smuggling drugs into Canada. Too many crimes are being committed here these days and I feel sure that drugs are at the bottom of some of them. This drug abuse has been allowed to go too far already. — (Mrs.) Olive M. V. Hamilton, 56 Sims Ave.

Film Series

The Art Gallery extends its apologies to those who missed the first night of "First Twenty Years of the Movies" which began Wednesday, March 14. Overlapping programs forced us to move the date ahead one week. However, the series will continue each Wednesday, 12 noon and 7:30 p.m.

These precious documents of early film making were 10 years in the restoration process before their release to the public. — W. K. Hoare, Assistant Director, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

JAMES H. GRAY

Put Prudhoe in Perspective

CALGARY — Premier Dave Barrett's proposed railway-pipeline combination through Alaska, the Yukon and British Columbia to move Alaska oil to the State of Washington got some mild attention on a dull day from Canadian headline writers. But it got as much serious attention from knowledgeable oilmen here as it is likely to get in Washington. To be precise, a gnat's eyeful.

At that, the Barrett proposal is hardly more crack-pot than many of the other alternatives to the trans-Alaska pipeline Canadians have been dithering about for the past three years. And compared with the Mackenzie railway people are talking about to move Canadian oil and gas out of the Arctic, the Barrett proposal is almost sensible.

Many Arguments

Let's bring Prudhoe Bay oil back into perspective. That oil is in the State of Alaska in an even more forbidding area, for the most part than the Canadian Arctic. The State of Alaska owns the oil reserves which underlie the state. There is no way the State of Alaska will let its oil be moved except across its own state.

Alaska knows what oil can do to provide state revenues. Following the Prudhoe Bay discovery it held a lease auction and took in more than $900 million.

For Canadians to appreciate the position Alaska must take, Canadians need only recall Canadian attitudes in connection with routes for its own crude oil and natural gas pipelines.

When Imperial Oil decided to serve its Sarnia refineries with western crude it located the terminal of its pipeline at Superior, Wisconsin, instead of Port Arthur. The storm of anger this precipitated almost blew Hon. C. D. Howe out of office.

Sound economics alone would have dictated that the Trans-Canada Pipelines' natural gas line be built to Toronto and Montreal by way of Minneapolis and Chicago. Canadians turned their backs on economics and insisted that it follow an all-Canadian route.

Today any Alaskan that opted for anything but a pipeline across Alaska would be committing political suicide.

All this, of course, is not to minimize the threat to British Columbia's environment that a pipeline-tanker system poses. Million-barrel tankers that require seven miles to come to a stop after the order hits the engine-room would give any coastal dweller nightmares. But not the Alaskans or the American administration.

Aside from compelling political considerations, Mr. Barrett's proposal suffers from a very practical handicap. He is advocating the worst known method of moving crude oil — by railway. It was to overcome the excessive cost of railway transportation that pipelines were invented.

Stacked and waiting at Prudhoe

Railway movement of petroleum is confined to moving small quantities small distances, and to the movement of special derivatives like propane, butane, etc. Because pipeline movement is so much more economical, Imperial oil, twenty years ago, scrapped a Great Lakes tanker-building program in midstream to extend its pipeline from Superior to Sarnia.

In a casual search through the Canadian oilpatch I was unable to find a single oilman who would discuss railways as a practical alternative to pipelines in moving crude oil in large volumes. Neither in the Great Plains, through the mountains or in the Canadian or American Arctic. Under Great Plains conditions for example, pipelines get rich moving oil through their big inch lines at two cents per 100 barrel miles. Railways would have to charge three or four times that figure.

Several Canadian oilmen noted that Canadians seem to have a Gertrude Steinish idea about pipelines. A pipeline is a pipeline is a pipeline. A crude oil pipeline differs drastically from a gas line. A crude oil line has to be kept warm in winter because hot oil moves better than cold oil. A natural gas line works best the colder it is. As temperature drops more gas can be compressed into it and thus improve its effective capacity.

In the Arctic context, natural gas would pose a much smaller threat to the environment than a crude oil line because of line temperature alone. Neither, they say, would be as damaging as a railway line, which would have to be double-tracked to handle the 1,400 cars of crude oil needed to be loaded daily to move out 1,000,000 barrels a day.

Alaska's Oil

But the technical arguments are legion. Everyone you talk to seems to have a new one. The one factor that outweighs all others in importance to people who have money invested is time. It will soon be five years since Prudhoe Bay became the sensation of the oil world. Half a billion dollars worth of pipe is eating up interest on the docks of Alaska. Every month that passes reduces the present worth of Alaska's oil. Essential engineering studies for a railway in Alaska or the Mackenzie valley would delay oil reaching market for another five years.

But over and above everything else hangs this fact. It is Alaska's oil. The oil companies have to live with whatever regulations Alaska adopts to govern the drilling and production of that oil. Even in the unlikely event that Washington should decide to take a serious look at the Barrett proposal, there is no way it could ever reach fruition over the opposition of the State of Alaska.

Some Pointers on Bill 42

Bill 42, the proposed Land Commission Act, has the objective of bringing development in rural and undeveloped areas under control — an objective that is very important for the future of this province.

Unfortunately, erroneous information about the legal effects of this Bill is obscuring the real issues. We would like to correct some of this erroneous information.

First, the Bill is not an expropriation statute and does not give the government the right or power to take an individual's land or personal property by compulsory process. Those who argue otherwise apparently base their argument on the power of the Commission under s. 7(i) to "purchase or otherwise acquire land."

This language is not sufficient to give the government the right to expropriate land. Powers to expropriate may be conferred only by clear and explicit statutory language. The word otherwise in the Bill merely allows the Commission to negotiate acquisition of property by means other than sale, (for example, by leasing it). The Law Reform Commission has pointed out, in its report on expropriation that every company incorporated under the Companies Act has the power to "purchase . . or otherwise acquire . . . real or personal property." The Commission states: No one would seriously suggest that every company (incorporated under the Companies Act) . . . has the power to expropriate.

Second, it has been argued that the power of the Commission, contained in s. 7(1) to "acquire and hold personal property" is socialistic in nature and an infringement on individual rights. That is an absurd proposition. Nearly all corporations in Canada have this power. The power may be intended to do no more than enable the Commission to buy office furniture, typewriters, and so on.

Bill 42 is not, as has been charged, government by regulation. The general power to make regulations contained in s.19 of the Bill is included in virtually every statute enacted in this province in the past twenty or more years. In fact s.19 contains 9 subparts that are quite specific in nature and appear, if anything, to constitute an attempt on the part of the legislative draftsmen to confine the powers of the commission. In that, the Bill is a step away from the government by regulation that we have been used to in the recent past.

The principle involved in Bill 42 is important to this province. The farmland is being urbanized at a rate of 10,000 acres per year. We can no longer afford the luxury of putting up houses or industrial developments wherever we please.

It is certainly true that the Bill, as now drafted, contains some deficiencies. The debate should be focussed on these deficiencies rather than on the emotional and false issues that have been drawn to our attention by some politicians and the press.

Among those issues that should concern the people of the province are the following: should the Commission be required to hold hearings before designating land? Should a landowner or any other member of the public have the right to appeal from designation of land under the Act? If so, to whom should that appeal lie? The Cabinet? The Environment and Land Use Committee? The courts? And how are the regional districts and municipalities to be co-ordinated with the Land Commission?

The Bill provides that the Commission may designate land as green belt, land bank, and park land in addition to farm land; however, the Bill does not spell out the consequences of such designation. What is intended and what should be the consequences of such a designation? —Alastair R. Lucas, Associate Professor of Law; Robert T. Franson, Assistant Professor of Law, University of British Columbia.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of March 20, 1913:

OTTAWA — On consideration of the estimates in the House of Commons yesterday an item for $9,800 for a private car for the minister of militia and defence, Col. Sam Hughes, was brought up.

"Wait a minute," said Mr. Lemteux. "You are railroading a private car. I want to know if it is armor plated."

Col. Hughes stated that he had bought it from the CNR for the sum mentioned. In open market it would have cost much more. He attacked various ministers for using luxurious automobiles on certain occasions, and declared, "I can assure the honorable gentleman that as minister I will not go about in second-class coaches while I am on the country's business. I have saved the country much money."

After Years Of Famine, China Gorges

By MARILYN BERGER
The Washington Post

For the westerner whose single most enduring vision of China was formed by "The Good Earth" and the starving family left with only one grain of rice, the country's colorful markets and the profusion of restaurants heaped high with food are stunning.

The Chinese seem to be eating all the time. My own theory is that they are making up for the many centuries of hunger. In the cities they line up at every street-corner pushcart to buy sweets on a stick. In the parks the pavilions bulge with rice cakes and candies that sell at a brisk pace. They especially seem to lavish every kind of delicacy on their children who are much chubbier than most you see in the United States. Doctors do not seem inclined to put a stop to the national gorging; many set their own standard for corpulence.

Food is so inexpensive that it is difficult at first to believe you have correctly translated yuan into dollars. At the grocer's on a recent mid-winter day, apples were going for five cents a pound, tomatoes for just over two cents a pound, huge and beautiful white mushrooms at a penny and a half a pound, pears about a penny and cabbage at a price too low to express in American currency. In a workers' restaurant a full meal can be hand for 20 cents. The price is right, by American standards. But even the Chinese, who earn an average of $20 to $25 a month, have no complaints about the cost of food, either at home or in restaurants. Foreigners, who usually go to the more chic establishments, can get seven course meals at around $7 for four people.

Second of Series

The enduring Chinese peasantry, who still make up 80 per cent of the population of 800 million, is the foundation for this marvelous profusion in a land where hunger and even starvation were a way of life for centuries. Farms have been organized into communes which are divided into production brigades and production teams. The latter is the basic accounting unit and strongly resembles the non-Marxist, non-Maoist villages of old.

Wang Tien-chen was introduced as a typical peasant who could compare the new society with the old. He still lives near the same village where, at the age of 12, he went to work for the landlord. He shares his two-room stone-floor cottage with his wife, three sons, a daughter-in-law and a grandson.

Often these days he has to get up before sunrise to harness the horses at the Red Star China-Korea Friendship People's Commune outside of Peking. Mostly he works seven days a week and earns 500 yuan — about $240 a year. He is 65 and will work until he is no longer able, for there is no retirement in the countryside.

'The Chinese seem to be eating all the time'

By any standard Wang is a very poor man. But he leaves no doubt that he is a contented one. He rubs his forehead as he pushes back his fur hat, then pats diffidently at his black padded cotton jacket, breaks into a toothless smile and explains how hard life was before the revolution.

"In the old society I had to go to work for the landlord; I had only a small space to live in made of mud and thatch," recited Wang, his breath condensing in the frigid air inside his house.

Now he has such luxuries as a single bare electric light bulb, a public address system that he can switch on and off for news and music, an outhouse and a water faucet that he shares with his neighbors and a small plot of land for growing vegetables. He is also the proud owner of two young pigs which he will one day be able to sell, possibly supplementing his income by 20 per cent that year.

Beyond such material satisfactions, Wang has the praise of the nation. For the peasant in Chinese ideology today is constantly reminded that he is no longer the victim of private exploitation, and that he has become, instead, the backbone of society. His indispensability and the glory of his achievements are called to his attention at each of the weekly political education meetings he is required to attend.

Throughout the country one hears of production goals surpassed despite the drought of 1972. According to the teachings of Chairman Mao, I was told repeatedly, the people faced up to natural disasters, worked harder and filled their quotas. Although purchases abroad show that the wheat crop did not quite live up to expectations, the well-fed look in the cities lends credence to the claims. Diplomats who have spent considerable time in China suggest that the abundance is not limited to the urban east.

Whether, with an increasing population, the prognosis for the future is good remains to be seen. Chinese officials claim to be unconcerned. Land now devoted to cotton and tobacco can be shifted to food production, they say. They add that only 12 per cent of the land is under cultivation and say that more will be reclaimed for agriculture. Outside experts are inclined to think that the land in question can never be anything but marginal.

For now, though, the eating is good.

I had long heard how visitors were treated to prolonged banquets but I hadn't realized that the banquets go—precisely—from nuts to soup. The hors d'oeuvres at every banquet are as predictable as the speeches. After nuts come cold sliced meats and vegetables. One continues to a profusion of dishes that vary according to regional specialties. If you have no menu, you never know when it will all end and about the time the tenth course arrives, you begin to think that, in fact, it won't.

In Nanking, my banquet with the responsible person of the revolutionary committee's foreign relations committee (that is how he described himself) included raw fish and chicken artistically arranged in the forms of pandas and trees and flowers, all to be cooked in a steaming broth. In Hangchow there was the most succulent fish in the world from the lake outside. In a Peking restaurant a suspicious dish appeared at our table. I picked at the chicken but even with all my culinary curiosity could not summon either the courage or courtesy to try the garnish which—to be plain about it—looked like worms. The next day I was told that the restaurant's specialty is "caterpillar chicken."

To answer a ponderous question that has been asked me repeatedly since my return, I will offer a word about Chinese breakfast. Foreign visitors are usually served such fare as ham or bacon and eggs. Once you figure out how to infiltrate the working man's restaurant, you find another breakfast altogether. You start with tea—everything in China starts with tea—and eat your way through sliced meats, noodles, fish-filled pasta known as dumplings and a kind of Chinese cannelonl. In other words, Chinese breakfast can most succinctly be described as Italian lunch.

HERE COMES THE HIPPIE JUDGE!

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS

DETROIT — With his long hair, golden-rimmed airplane glasses, blue-and-white shirt of fancy design, wide-belted slimline trousers and tan cowboy boots, the lanky young man might easily have been mistaken for a law clerk as he mixed casually with people the other day inside the court room of Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Justin C. Ravitz.

And then someone called him "your honor." This was Judge Ravitz — the first known political radical of the 1970's to sit on an American criminal court bench — a 32-year-old Marxist who startled Detroit last November by being elected smashingly to a 10-year term on that bench; who would like to see American society restructured along the lines of Mao's China or Castro's Cuba; and who, at his swearing-in outraged many Detroiters (and won the admiration of others) by refusing to stand for the pledge of allegiance.

There was, he explained, no liberty or justice for many.

What kind of a judge has Ravitz been now that he has completed his first two months in office?

He has changed neither his politics nor his personal style, and this stance is partly apparent in the courtroom.

To Ravitz, American society is still "an ongoing class struggle between those who own and those who don't own," and he is resolutely on the side of the non-owners. He allows no American flag in what he calls his "people's court." No one stands when he comes in to the room. There is no clerk's cry of "oyez, oyez, oyez," no opening-of-court ritual at all. On a typical day the judge escends to the bench robeless chewing on a toothpick, his tie loosened.

But when court begins, the image of relaxed radical utterly dissolves.

Ravitz is all business in the role of judge. Speaking quietly in a low, somewhat furry voice, he conducts his court with what appears to a layman to be a high degree of seriousness, strict attendance to the law and the facts, and fidelity to quite unradical principles and precedents of American Jurisprudence.

Indeed, Ravitz has won high marks from many of his more conventional colleagues in the legal fraternity.

How does this picture of a careful constitutionalist, relying solidly on the law and its rules, square with that of Marxist radical?

Ravitz says he believes that at this point it is "more progressive" for him to work within the system than outside it.

"I can't stay in this institution if I flaunt its laws, if I become a hippie radical on the bench," he says.

As a judge, Ravitz' philosophy has led him to go to what he regards as all reasonable lengths to avoid sending defendants awaiting trial to the County Jail; to be lenient in granting bond when he believes that can safely be done.

"High bond for a poor man is the same as no bond at all," he says. "It amounts to preventive detention."

Ravitz is especially careful to explain a defendant's rights to him slowly, deliberately, in conversational English rather than in the "silly jargon" he sneers at.

But for all his insistence on applying the safeguards of the Constitution, Ravitz asserts, "that doesn't mean for a second that I accept the framework" of the American judicial establishment. He says he believes that the adversary system, "with lawyers standing up there and playing a game of wits," is a poor way to pursue justice. Ideally, he would rather see small, decentralized "neighborhood people's courts," where neighbors would informally talk about "what happened and why did it happen, and help both the victim and the victimizers."

"If there were a whole bunch of me's over here," he says, "we'd change the whole ballpark."

After Knife, a New You

RUSSELL BAKER

Because of the miracle of cosmetic surgery, people are now spending a lot of time trying to decide what to look like. Following are just a few of the options.

1. HAIR IMPLANTS. Originally, the technique of seeding a bald scalp with hair from a more fruitful part of the body — something like planting plugs of zoysia grass in a sullen lawn — was regarded merely as a boon to entertainers and politicians, whose work requires them to look perpetually young.

Now, however, it is becoming popular with people who want to be in the avant-garde of style. Many variations are possible. This summer on the beaches we will see the first appearances of trend-conscious men who have had hair implants on their chests.

A popular pattern is the so-called "him and her" look. The husband's chest is seeded with hair from his wife's scalp. This will be particularly striking in marriages between dark-haired men and blonde women, especially if the husband's new chest hair is allowed to grow 12 inches long before cutting and setting.

Wives can make the effect even more striking by having their upper lips implanted with their husband's mustache hair.

2. NOSE CHANGES. The "nose job" has been a surgical staple for years, but now that it can be done in conjunction with "jaw jobs" and removal of bags under the eyes, it is possible to come out of the hospital looking brand new.

A word of caution, however, watch out for cosmetic surgeons who think they are wits. In Palm Beach not long ago, a woman who had gone into the hospital to have her nose lengthened, her jaw shortened and the bags removed from under her eyes, received a bad shock when she awoke to discover that her surgeon, in a seizure of playfulness, had removed the bags all right from under the eyes, but had placed one of them under the new longer nose and the other under her new jaw.

Needless to say, she had to cancel plans for her dinner dance that weekend.

3. HIGHER BUTTOCKS. This is one of the newer surgical improvements on nature and a popular one it is. Who would have guessed that so many rich women were yearning for higher centres of gravity? With some slitting, snipping, excisions of fatty tissue and sturdy suturing, fantastically highly paid surgeons are able to hoist the rear cushioning apparatus and, thus, give a new outline to anybody who is dissatisfied with his old one.

There are still needless fears that the surgical uplifting, if the stitches are too tight, will not leave enough flexibility for sitting down. This is nonsense. In some cases, one of the two uplifted buttocks has been known to give way inexplicably and all with a disconcerting "thunk!" back into its old position. This can be embarrassing if it happens while one is trying to impress a large crowd, because it makes you look diagonal when your back is turned. It is easily repaired, however. Be sure to go to a surgeon who gives a 90-day guarantee on his work.

4. HEIGHT CHANGES. The fashionable new elevator shoes are enough for most people who are bored being short, and slouching will always be the economical solution for people who are tired of being tall. For those who cannot feel that a problem has been solved until they have undergone anesthesia and knife, however, there are many original opportunities.

Most of these involve illusions. It is hard to make a person much taller on the operating table — or, for that matter, to make him much shorter if he wants to retain his agility — so cosmetic surgery creates the illusion of change by shifting those parts of the body on which the beholder's eye naturally alights.

The teeth, for example. Americans, being obsessed with smiling, always look each other directly in the teeth. And teeth, as we know, are relatively easy to manipulate cosmetically.

★ ★ ★

A person who is embarrassed about his excessive height, for example, might solve his problem by having his teeth implanted at, say, chest level or, depending on how short he wanted to seem, at belt level. (Knee level presents serious surgical problems and, moreover, as the knees are too far from the brain control system to be thought about with such consistency, the teeth would be on their own much of the time, probably thoughtlessly chewing up silk hose or trouser legs.)

Inquiries about where to go to change into somebody else should be addressed to your family doctor rather than this column, which will be far too busy having feet removed from its mouth to answer the mail.

Kierans Makes A Good Case

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

It is easier to dismiss Eric Kierans as a man who couldn't run the Post Office — the brushoff used by one mining executive — than to answer his documented case that the people of Manitoba are getting a poor return on the wealth produced by their mines.

Kierans' former troubles as postmaster-general cannot wipe out his credentials as a successful businessman and economist. He is also a passionate advocate of a shift in Canada's economic policies away from rapid development of natural sources to labor-intensive secondary manufacturing and services.

This advocacy colors his indignant and crusading "Report on Natural Resources Policy for Manitoba," which recommends that the government gradually take over mining exploration and development from private enterprise.

Kierans likens mining in Manitoba (and Canada) today to operation of the Hudson's Bay Company in colonial times, which enriched the English shareholders in the monopoly fur trade while Canadian trappers were struggling for subsistence. He contends that for the sake of some employment the provincial and federal governments are handing over to big corporations most of what is rightfully the people's wealth.

For example, the big three metal mining firms — International Nickel, Sherritt Gordon and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting — produced metals worth $676 million in Manitoba during the three years 1968-70. They earned profits before taxes of $192 million, and the people of Manitoba received $15.6 million in taxes on these profits — an amount equal to only 2.3 cents for each $1 worth of resources produced. Federal profit tax claimed approximately another $15 million.

Royalties do even less than taxes to repay the people for the depletion of their mineral wealth. In 1970 the same three companies produced metals worth $295 million and paid royalties of about $4 million — 1.3 cents out of every dollar's worth of production.

As for Kierans' key recommendation, there is much to be said for a strong government presence in the development of a province's mineral wealth. There are several ways to achieve this besides nationalization. But Kierans' argument that the provinces (abetted by federal tax policies) are abjectly competing for the right to be exploited is entirely convincing; and so is his case for greater public benefits from the mining industry. If other methods did not work, then nationalization should be considered.

Raising taxes or royalties in one province is not the answer; the mining companies would simply shift much of their activity to more hospitable jurisdictions, while remaining in the high-tax province just long enough to skim of the richest lodes.

A province could act independently through some form of joint public-private ventures on the model of Panarctic Oils. This would not only enable the public to reap substantial profits from mining, but would also enable the government to influence the development of the industry toward the long-run public interests in employment, stable communities and conservation. And the capital cost of participation need not be great; the government could exchange licenses to explore and mine for equity in companies.

The situation analyzed by Kierans — exploitation of our mineral wealth with too little public profit—deserves serious attention and action by other provinces than Manitoba. Not least Ontario, which four years ago announced a tough-sounding policy of compelling mining companies to smelt and process ores in Canada, and then promptly riddled it with so many exemptions that it is almost worthless in terms of making more jobs and keeping more wealth in this country.

Russian Holiday for Students

About 183 students and staff from Central Junior Secondary School will head for Moscow and Leningrad to spend their Easter holiday break from school.

School principal W. G. Garner announced today that the trip — scheduled for April 18 to 29 — is in its final planning stages and 150 children have received their required shots, pictures and visas.

He said the school staff chose Russia as their destination when plans were first formulated last May.

"We looked at a number of places and decided Russia would give us an opportunity to tear apart some of the mystique that exists about the country."

The school, he said, "has started a Russian program of courses that includes language, history and geography instruction for the students that signed up to make the trip.

After an 11 a.m. departure April 18 from Vancouver, the students can look forward to witnessing the Moscow Circus; a day at Petrovorytz, Leningrad; a series of band concerts in both Leningrad and Moscow, and a visit to the Heritage.

As a good number of the students that signed up for the trip — cost is about $500 — are members of the school band and basketball team, Garner said, a basketball game with Russian students has been arranged by the Soviet Minister of Sports.

The group will spend five days in each of the two major Soviet cities.

"Although we've run into a few minor roadblocks — arranging for 183 visas to arrive on time — the Russian government has been co-operative. They've done everything they can to help with arrangements," said Garner, who will also be going on the trip.

He said the trip is one of the first large scale school planned trips to Russia, although a group of 25 students from Ontario have made a similar tour.

One of the recent changes in planning occurred, he said, when the American dollar was devalued. "It increased our final payment by about $10 per person."

He said all participants have raised their own air fare for the chartered flight handled by World Airways.

"We looked at the grants that were available for this kind of venture, but when we found out what we had to go through to apply for them we decided against them."

"We want to have your youngsters meet theirs and foster better understanding between the two countries," said Garner.

Meanwhile at a more practical level, the students, studying aspects of Russia in anticipation, have found that the temperature during their visit should be about the same as Prince George — about 40 degrees.

Cloverdale and Richmond Schools To Offer French in Kindergarten

Two types of French language kindergarten classes will be offered at Cloverdale and Richmond schools starting September of 1973, the Greater Victoria school board decided Monday.

The decision follows results of a survey by the board's instruction-curriculum committee which was conducted to assess parents' willingness to have their children participate in French immersion classes.

Based on replies of 219 parents, the committee recommended that total immersion classes on a half-day basis be offered at Richmond.

The other half-day will be used for a watered down type of immersion, in which the program will be half-English instruction and half-French instruction.

The committee also suggested that two half-day classes at Cloverdale be offered on the half and half arrangement.

Assistant director of curriculum, Ted Callbeck told the board, teachers to be considered for the classes must have kindergarten specialist certification and be "thoroughly bilingual and native in French."

It was felt that the classes would attract at least enough pupils to allow two full-time bilingual teachers.

The program has been planned as an eight-year experiment taking the original class through to at least grade seven with new kindergarten classes being started each year if the program is successful.

Parents who completed application forms said they were willing to provide transportation.

The additional cost of the program would be about $50 a pupil the first year with diminishing costs as the experiment progresses.

The highest number of respondents, some 137, favored the half-English, half-French ratio of language instruction, an arrangment originally proposed by Trustee Philip Ney.

The board accepted the committee's recommendations in principle and asked that additional information be presented at it's April meeting.

GABRIOLA PICKED

GABRIOLA ISLAND — Highways Minister Bob Strachan has told residents here a new ferry terminal to replace the outmoded facility at Departure Bay in Nanaimo definitely will be located on Gabriola.

"No other alternatives are being considered," he said in a letter to the island's advisory planning commission. The letter was made public Monday night at the commission's regular meeting.

The minister said the decision is based solely on highways department studies although a final decision on whether to locate it on Gabriola or a nearby islet has apparently not yet been taken.

Islanders are about evenly divided on the relocation with those in favor of the move claiming a slight numerical edge. Those opposed to the move have formed a committee in an attempt to rally residents of all the gulf islands from Cortes to Saturna. Vancouver residents opposed to the Gabriola site are also organizing.

Strachan, in his letter, said a right-of-way sufficiently wide to accommodate a four-lane highway with divided wooded median is being planned.

The highway, according to previous suggestions, would cross the south end of Gabriola and, by means of two short bridges, connect with Vancouver Island several miles south of Nanaimo.

Trustees Reject Outdoor Centre

Greater Victoria School Board Monday defeated a motion by Trustee Hal Knight seeking a study on the feasibility of an outdoor education centre.

Trustee Lavinia Greenwood told the board a study on available campsites south of Duncan, and financed by a federal Local Initiatives Project grant, is being conducted by Peter Rose, an environment student at University of Victoria.

She said, "charitable organizations want us to use their facilities and we should lease them," before considering buying.

"We can't demand that teachers go out and camp with students. The priority is to develop outdoor education itself rather than buying land," she said.

Knight argued that studies are being undertaken by other area school boards, "and we should know what their plans are."

The board decided that until Rose's report is available in June another study should not proceed.

Death Unknown For Year

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mrs. Emma J. Banks, a retired 76-year-old maid, died alone in an apparently abandoned apartment one year ago. But no one knew she died.

This week her skeleton, clad in a blue coat, robe and slip and lying on a bed, was found in the locked apartment that had no gas or electricity. During the past year, her son said he assumed she was living with her former employer. The family that employed her for 14 years thought she was alive and living with her son.

Mrs. W. T. Jeanes said Monday she gave the small apartment to Mrs. Banks rent free. The family maid retired last year and moved to nearby Sealy to live with her son, Ben Banks, but she returned often to stay with the Jeanes family a few days.

"She really looked forward to those visits," Ben Banks said, "That's all she would talk about when she came back. We thought she had stayed."

Sunday a young boy peered through a rusty screen and inside the apartment he saw Mrs. Banks' skull on the bed.

"On her last visit to our house, she gathered up her things, waved goodbye and told us she was going home," Mrs. Jeanes said outside the old apartment. "We just never thought it would be to this place."

Gatehouses End Days of Park Rowdies

The spread of the gatehouse registration system in B.C.'s provincial parks appears to be marking the end of rowdy elements among the camping fraternity, according to the annual report of the provincial parks branch.

The branch report for 1972, contained in the annual report of the department of recreation and conservation, was filed in the legislature Monday, has nothing but praise for the efficiency of the system.

Operated in conjunction with full-time patrolmen during the night hours, the gatehouse was extended to six provincial parks from two in 1971 — with significant results.

The report says the gatehouses didn't begin functioning as early as the branch would have liked, due to construction and black-topping of roads. But once they did, "long-lasting disturbances were eliminated, as were virtually all complaints of rowdyism from the camping public."

Statistics to back up the point are cited from the Cultus Lake provincial park, where evictions increased by 96.2 per cent over the previous year.

The answer, apparently, is to give the noisy offenders short shrift.

"Patrolmen evicted troublemakers before the disturbance could grow to major proportions."

This policy of stricter enforcement, the report says, was based on experiences in 1971 when it was found that repeated warnings proved futile.

At Cultis Lake, too, there other satisfactory results. Damage to park facilities dropped 16.6 per cent over 1971, and thefts fell by 47 per cent.

Staff recorded 100 per cent collection of camping fees, whereas in 1969 there were 4,554 campers unaccounted for.

CZ WANTED $10M FOR OCEAN FALLS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of Crown Zellerbach, Robert Rogers, said Monday that the company wanted about $10 million for the Ocean Falls pulp and paper community which the provincial government announced Friday it got for $1 million.

"As president of Crown Zellerbach I had an obligation to shareholders to recover any value possible from the assets there," Rogers said in a statement.

Phil Held Record

"Flying Phil" Gaglardi, former rehabilitation minister in the Social Credit administration, continued to live up to his nickname during 1972, according to the log report of the provincial government's flying service, tabled Monday in the legislature.

Gaglardi, who has been in political hot water in the past for frequent speeding violations, and who resigned his cabinet seat during a controversy over use of the government's leased Lear jet, led all cabinet ministers — both Social Credit and NDP — in the annual compilation of plane trips taken by members of the government.

The former Kamloops MLA logged a total of 109 flights during 1972 on government aircraft, including five flights after the Aug. 30 provincial election which threw his party from power. The last flight was taken on Sept. 12, three days before the new NDP administration was sworn into office.

Gaglardi's figures do not come close to the totals he amassed in previous years as a cabinet minister, perhaps because he did not have a full year's access to aircraft.

His all-time record for flights came in 1969, when he logged a total of 190 in the year, or more than one flight every two days.

His totals in 1970 and 1971 were both 157 flights.

Gaglardi outstripped his cabinet colleagues by a long shot. In 1972, former minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy was closest with a total of 29 flights, including four after the election.

Former municipal affairs minister Dan Campbell, provincial secretary Wesley Black and labor minister James Chabot all pushed Mrs. McCarthy for the runner-up berth. Black had 27 flights, Chabot 26 flights and Campbell 25.

Former premier W. A. C. Bennet registered no flights on government aircraft through the year, due to his professed dislike for flying in small aircraft.

Members of the new government had totals far behind the former cabinet ministers, but had only 3½ months in which to boost their totals.

Three ministers — Education Minister Eileen Dailly, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley and Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich — shared the lead with eight flights each.

PM Rebuffs Municipal Power Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — Municipal leaders were rebuffed with soothing words Monday when they sought help from the federal government in their campaign to gain a greater share of governmental power and revenue.

Spokesman for a 35-member delegation from the Federation of Mayors and Municipalities spent two hours in debate with the federal cabinet over the issue and were told to take their arguments directly to the provinces.

A major theme of both the delegation's arguments and a 22-page federation brief was that the municipalities must have greater representation in policy-making. In particular, the federation asked for representation at federal-provincial conferences and for municipal representatives on federal bodies like the Canadian transport commission and International Joint Commission.

Phillips Leads Bill 42 Filibuster

By BRIAN BUTTERS and PAUL MOSS

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace) added another hour and a half to his continuing speech on Bill 42 in the legislature Monday as debate on the controversial land control legislation was renewed.

Phillips spoke for more than five hours when the bill was discussed last Tuesday. His Monday contribution pushed the total to 6½ hours. Through house rules, he continues to hold the floor and will continue his speech the next time the government allows debate on the bill to continue.

When Phillips adjourned the debate minutes before the Monday closing time of 6 p.m., Premier Barrett indicated to the house that the legislation will be discussed again today.

Phillips has said he has material for several more hours of speaking. A colleague, Bob McClelland (SC—Langley), plans to follow Phillips in the debate and says he has at least five hours of material.

Phillips took aim Monday at Premier Barrett, accusing the premier of "misleading the people of B.C." by making conflicting statements on the intent of Bill 42.

The Socred said Barrett had told an open-line audience last Friday that aspects of the Land Commission legislation are similar to those contained in the Municipal Act.

"He was not telling all the facts," Phillips said.

"The premier wants to become an octopus with its tentacles in every community in the province and into the taxpayers' pockets as well, he said to heavy Socred applause.

Phillips referred to the 1970 debate in the legislature over the Socreds' proposed Land Act, which was passed later in that session. He said Barrett — then leader of the Oppostion — had pushed for the government to put the legislation to committee for study.

And now, Phillips said, Barrett is not willing to do the same thing with the Land Commission legislation — put it to committee and take into account public opinion on the subject.

"Somewhere along the line, this is a two-faced policy," he said. Barrett was guilty of perpetrating a "sham" or a "farce," he said, either in 1970 or during the debate on this year's legislation.

Speaker Gordon Dowding forced Phillips to withdraw the last remarks.

The Socred made reference to a campaign advertisement describing Barrett as "a man you can trust."

"I make the prediction that the people will never trust him again," Phillips said.

POOR PR

Phillips said Barrett had admitted on the radio that the government did a poor job of introducing and explaining the bill, yet he had ignored the opportunity to do that when hundreds of farmers demonstrated outside the Legislative Buildings last week.

"Why didn't the premier do his public relations job then?" he said.

He noted that Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich had already "retreated" from his original position, by promising four basic amendments to the bill when he "soft-shoed through the bull sale in Kamloops on Bill 42" last week.

The legislation can't be amended in any substantial way, Phillips said, urging instead a "broad new approach."

He said the government should "take Bill 42 to the public," by holding hearings and getting a broad range of views.

"With just a little more humility and respect this government could salvage its position and accomplish the aim everyone wants — to save farm land and the farmer," he said.

Phillips was rebuked several times by Speaker Gordon Dowding, as he had been in the earlier debate, for being tedious, repetitious and not confining his comments to the principle of the bill.

During much of Phillips' speech the house was more than half-empty, the attendance falling to as low as 14 MLAs for certain periods.

Scott Wallace (CP—Oak Bay) also raised the issue of Barrett's statements on Bill 42 over the weekend.

CRUCIAL ASPECT

Wallace rose during Monday's question period and asked if Barrett could elaborate on statements he made comparing Bill 42 to the Municipal Act.

After receiving an evasive answer from Barrett, Wallace made comments outside the house.

He said he takes "strong exception to such a crucial aspect of Bill 42 being misrepresented in public."

He said the comparison of the two pieces of legislation by Barrett was "not what you would expect from the leader of the province."

"I am saying he made a mistake and that he possibly was not aware of the provisions of the Municipal Act which I referred to," Wallace said.

EX-TORY LEADER HIRED BY GOV'T

Resources Minister Bob Williams Monday confirmed that former B.C. Progressive Conservative leader John DeWolf is being retained by the provincial government.

Answering a question on the order paper from Ed Smith (SC — North Peace), Williams said DeWolf has been hired by the government as an "economic consultant."

Williams added that DeWolf is "not on salary."

Forest Industry Balks at Penalty

The forest industry's dissatisfaction with streambank protection guidelines was expressed Monday to the legislature's forestry and fisheries committee.

B.C. Council of Forest Industries president Gordon Draeseke told the committee the forest industry does not like the idea that it and the B.C. Forest Service have to pay costs of streambank protection. The costs should be borne instead by the beneficiaries of the protection, he said, be they the federal or provincial government or any of their departments.

Draeseke also released a brief the council has given to chief forester Ian Cameron, who explained the new guidelines to the committee last week. The brief held that the guidelines are being enforced too stringently, which will result in an artificial increase in lumber costs and the inability of the industry to achieve an increased annual cut of timber.

Enforcement of the guidelines, Draeseke said, will lead to "a prohibitive increase" in both operating and capital costs.

"If the logging industry has to absorb the costs, they will only perform with reluctance. There will be continual argument and controversy, and the attitude will be to do the bare minimum rather than to co-operate wholeheartedly."

Draeseke said protection of streambanks could conceivably cost the forest industry $5 million in a specific area, and result in a benefit of only a few hundred dollars.

"We don't think that this is reasonable or right," he said.

"If someone wants an expensive thing done for them, they should be prepared to pay for it."

Committee member Harold Steves said there would be no threat to streams at all if logging was not carried out in nearby areas.

"If that's what you want to do, you'd be shutting down the forest industry for the sake of a few fish," Draeseke said.

The forest industry presentation also complained about lack of co-ordination between various government agencies in the administration of forest management. Draeseke said the industry has been given conflicting advice from different areas of government on how to go about logging.

Blanket guidelines are not the answer to the problem of protection of streambanks, Draeseke said. On-the-spot decisions by wildlife biologists, by conservation officers and by loggers themselves have to be relied upon to result in good forest management along with adequate protection of bodies of water and fish.

The industry's brief to the committee recommended that no single all-embracing solution for streambank protection be legislated.

Government resource agencies should undertake complete inventories of all streams and their relative values and research should be carried out to determine the importance of streambank vegetation to stream environment.

The brief also recommends that staff of the forest service be used to administer forest management policies. The staff must be adequately trained "to ensure a balanced consideration of all values," it said.

Holiday Treatment Costs Less

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — It would be cheaper for the Ontario government to send patients suffering from nervous exhaustion or hypertension on a paid vacation for two weeks to the Bahamas or Spain than to put them in hospital for the same period of time, says hospital board chairman H. S. Milne.

In his annual report to the Port Hope and District Hospital trust Mr. Milne said Thursday that since Sept. 30, 1972, the average gross cost for standard ward care patients for all public hospitals in Ontario was $54.94 a day. For two weeks this would amount to nearly $770.

EL PASO PAYS MORE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Company Ltd. and El Paso Natural Gas Co. of Houston have announced they have signed an agreement for Westcoast to provide an additional 450 million cubic feet of gas daily by 1977 from Canada to the United States company.

The agreement also provides for funding exploration and drilling programs up to $80 million to find and develop new natural gas reserves in Westcoast's supply areas.

Price increases in Canada resulting from Canadian regulatory rulings or arbitration proceedings would be passed along to El Paso.

The export price on the initial increase and the inclusion of an additional incentive charge would be about 37 cents per thousand cubic feet compared with 32 cents per thousand cubic feet in the past.

Westcoast now delivers 800 million cubic feet of gas per day to El Paso at Sumas, Washington., on the U.S.-Canadian border.

The agreement is subject to approval by the Canadian national Energy Board and the U.S. federal power commission.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. These hours to be kept to filing deadline, April 30. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. I contribute, at my place of employment, to a pension plan. However, as I want to have a larger pension when I retire I have also taken out a retirement savings plan with a trust company. What is the maximum contribution that I can claim on my income tax form for both of them?

A. For 1972 taxation year, as an employee you are allowed to deduct your contributions to the pension plan and your registered retirement savings plan up to a combined total of $2,500, or 20 per cent of your earned income if it is les than $12,500.

Q. I am self-employed and I pay into a registered retirement savings plan with an insurance company. I have no salaried income and understand that I can claim for income tax purposes, a maximum of $4,000 for my retirement savings plan. Is this correct?

A. If you are not covered by an employee pension plan you would be entitled to claim amounts paid into a registered retirement savings plan up to $4,000, or 20 per cent of your earned income for the year, whichever is less.

business

Pacific NW Bell

Pacific Northwest Bell earned $59,637,000 during 1972, an increase of $10 million over earnings the year before, and it still was not enough says President Zane E. Barnes.

"Earnings must be related to the amount of capital invested in the business," Barnes contended in his year-end report to shareholders.

"In PNB, our average invested capital is over $1.2 billion and 1972 earnings produced a return on that investment of only 7.66 per cent."

PNB has been authorized an 8.1 per cent rate of return and is asking the state to be allowed a return of 9.5 per cent.

PNB reported operating revenues during 1972 rose more than $67 million dollars, from $463,537,000 in 1971 to $530,721,000 last year. Operating expenses and taxes also rose by $55.4 million. Earnings per share increased by seven cents to $1.37 in 1972.

PanCanadian

PanCanadian Petroleum Ltd., reports net income of $15.2 million or 49 cents a share in 1972 compared with $14.5 million or 48 cents a share the previous year.

Net income for 1971 included an extraordinary gain of $399,812. Gross reenue totalled $47.1 million up from the $39.4 million recorded in 1971.

The company attributed the increases to a 20.7-per-cent increase in crude oil production, an 11.6-per-cent increase in natural gas production and a 7.5-per-cent increase in natural gas liquids production.

Winoco

Winoco Oil Ltd., reports net earnings of $1,043,993 or 34 cents a share in 1972 compared with $906,255 or 30 cents a share in 1971.

The company said closing the operation of the transportation division last June resulted in a decrease in revenues and net income for the year. Net earnings after the extraordinary item loss were 30 cents a share.

Gross revenue was $9,496492 up from the $8,719,319 reported the previous year.

Of Duncan and Duncan, And Jim and His Cast

The weekend in review, and I guess that Duncan still has to be regarded as No. 1 on the Island when it comes to men's curling if the Victoria Curling Club's annual bonspiel was the final criterion for the season.

It was Fred Duncan against Gwyn Hughes in the Times final, and pity poor Freddie. When he was putting his rink together for the event and needed a spare, the fellow he came up with was Vern Kaspick, three times a national finalist. And with Gary Merrett and John Pylypiuk also in the lineup, Fred's rink could best be described as "loaded". And also the very best.

A distinguished curling visitor, with his left forearm in a cast, was Victoria's Jim Armstrong, second with Richmond's Jack Tucker at the Brier, and the skip of B.C.'s entry in the Canadian Mixed at Charlottetown next week.

Jim suffered a dislocated wrist at Edmonton and missed the last few games, but he says the arm feels "as good as it can", and that this week he will have a special cast put on in the hope that it will allow him more freedom of movement for the championship. But whether he will be able to sweep, or not, remains to be seen.

Jim was saying that perhaps heavy ice at Edmonton was the main undoing of the B.C. rink. We normally don't play a heavy hitting game," he explained, "and as the ice would get progressively heavier during a game, it caused us some problems, particularly Jack (Tucker), who basically throws a light stone." If Jim is in the record book as the first player ever to be forced out of the Brier by injury (who said curling was a soft game?) he really doesn't want to be remembered for that alone. "I think we have a good chance in the mixed."

★ ★ ★

Rumor has it that the Victoria Regals (nee Royals) won't be a force in the Premier Soccer League this summer, that former coach Brian Hughes is looking elsewhere, that both those forecasts could change, that Vancouver Canucks would like nothing more than to have John Ferguson's name of a player form, that Milt Schmidt recently turned down an offer to become managing director of the Canucks, that he will accept a similar post with Washington D.C. when that city becomes an NHL member, that Dale Tallon has already agreed to jump to the World Hockey Association unless the Canucks are prepared to jump through hoops to keep him on the coast, that former Victoria Maple Leaf coach Frank Mario will soon take up residence here as the west coast scout for St. Louis Blues, and that it is not true that the recent Victoria press curling championship, won by Pete Medwid, was not posted until the event had been completed.

★ ★ ★

Meanwhile, word from a wandering offspring is that Buck Houle, former Maple Leaf manager here, is fine and frisky in Ottawa with his WHA problems, wishes to be remembered to all his old cronies, and that the Ottawa team has a good chance to make the playoffs. Incidentally, Buck didn't move the family to Ottawa. He kept his home in Toronto just in case.

And now, in answer to a query, according to the latest available figures the highest paid players in professional sport today are in the National Basketball Association.

The average salary in the NBA is $90,000, with 50 players getting over $100,000. In the NHL, the average is $40,000; in the ABA, $37,000; in the major baseball leagues, $37,000; and in the NFL, $27,500. The proportion of income paid to the players is also highest in the NBA, a tidy 45 per cent. Further, there are 45 NHL players making over $100,000, but only 10 in the NFL, and the minimum salary is also the lowest in the NFL where it is $12,000, compared to basketball's high of $17,500.

What other people are saying:

Acting Canuck GM Hal Laycoe, when discussing the recent surge of the team: "Al Davidson hasn't been doing so well with his coaching lately." (For the uninitiated, Davidson, a radio broadcaster, is not one of management's greatest boosters).

Joe Namath in Sport Magazine, when asked if he bet with a bookmaker on the results of the last four Super Bowl games, which he had currectly predicted, replied: "What's a bookmaker?"

Poile Quits Canuck Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norman (Bud) Poile announced late Monday he will not return as general manager of the Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League for the 1973-74 season.

Poile, now on a leave of absence, said he has spent the past two and one half weeks discussing the general manager's position with Canucks' president Thomas K. Scallen, vice-president Lyman D. Walters and director Coleman E. Hall.

Poile went to hospital Nov. 21 suffering from what was offically described as "exhaustion." About three weeks later, he was granted a leave of abscence and Hal Laycoe was installed as interim general manager.

He said Monday the owners were willing to wait but "my doctors suggested it would be two months or more before a complete evaluation could be made."

"Over the weekend I decided it would be in the best interests that I give up the general manager's job," he said.

Contracts of Poile, Laycoe and coach Vic Stasiuk all expire May 30 and during the weekend Walters said any decision on future status would be made by the "general manager."

Monday, Walters said the directors want Poile to remain as a club officer. "We want to keep Bud on the staff as part of our management team," he said.

Trouble in the NHL's Inner Sanctum

Ailing Seals May Move Again But Toronto Is an Unlikely Destination

NEW YORK (CP) — The inner sanctum of the National Hockey League has been working overtime trying to keep its house in order.

Despite the security blanket NHL governors manage to throw over their meetings, it's obvious all is not well.

California's ailing franchise may end up in NHL hands until a new owner is found. This happened once before.

The owners and players are working on a modified reserve clause, and it has been tough slugging so far. Not a word on the modifications from either side.

Kansas City also has problems making good its conditional franchise for the 1974-75 season. The governors have heard one report after another in the last 10 months. Still no decision.

Cincinnati is standing in the wings, ready to take Kansas City's place.

The governors at their two-day meetings here last week kept the lid on their discussions of the Oakland situation. But during the weekend, owner Charles O. Finley blew the cover.

Finley has said he wants to unload his California Golden Seals but can't find a buyer.

While Finley was calming a player mini-revolt Saturday, he disclosed that the NHL governors had indeed discussed the Oakland problem and were willing to take the franchise off his hands for the right price.

Monday, NHL President Clarence Campbell confirmed Finley's statement was essentially correct.

Finley was quoted in Oakland as saying: "I can't say I will stay in hockey. But I'll say the league is very considerate and I'm giving their offer considerable thought."

Poor attendance has plagued the Golden Seals since they first came into the NHL in the big expansion of the 1967-68 season.

The original owner, Barend van Gerbig, sold the franchise back to the NHL and Finley purchased it two years ago for $4.5 million.

The NHL negotiators met in New York again Monday to discuss the new reserve clause and the Kansas City franchise. Again no hard news was announced.

Campbell attended the meetings and flew to Montreal where he quickly knocked down the possibility of the Oakland franchise moving to Toronto.

Bill Ballard, vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, was quoted as saying in Toronto that Finley had talked to him "within the last five or six months" about shifting the Seals to Toronto.

"There is just no way that could happen, and I am not at all sure the Toronto club would gie it any serious countenance," Campbell said later in Montreal.

Penny To Face Soviet Jumpers

Penny May, a former Victorian now living in Burnaby, was among 12 B.C. athletes selected to represent Canada in a dual track and field meet against Russia beginning Friday in Montreal.

Miss May will be competing in the long jump.

Others picked for the squad from B.C. were Tom Howard (3,000-metre run), John Hawkins (high jump), Rick Cuttel (pentathelon), Gordon Stewart (pentathelon), Patti Loverock (50-metre sprint), Sharon Williams (high jump), John Beers (pentathelon) and Alan Kane (pole vault), all of Vancouver, along with Ken Elmer of Burnaby (1,500-metre run), Tony Tenischi of Trail (hammer throw) and Wendy Taylor of Abbotsford (50-metre hurdles).

Castaways Finish In Third

Castaways slipped into third place in the Vancouver Island Men' Field Hockey Association by defeating Fossils 1-0 and 3-2 in two of four matches Sunday that finished off the regular season schedule.

In other matches, Orangemen blanked University of Victoria Vikings 2-0 and Rebels Red fvought to a scoreless deadlock with Tigers.

League-champion Rebels Grey will meet fourth-place Rebels Red in one semi-final while second-place Tigers and Castaways square off in the other.

Burnaby Nabs Peewee Title

COMOX — Burnaby Winter Club captured the B.C. peewee hockey championship here at the weekend by sweeping six straight games in a round-robin tournament.

Castlegar finished second with a 5-1-0 record while Nanaimo and Comox finished with 2-3-1 counts. Nanaimo picked up third spot on a goals-for basis.

Other teams in the tourney were North Kamloops (fifth), Fort St. John (sixth) and Kimberley (seventh).

Raiders Go to Court In Playoff-Date Fight

NEW YORK (CP) — New York Raiders of the World Hockey Association said Monday they would go to court today, seeking playoff dates at the Nassau County Coliseum.

The Coliseum, in suburban Uniondale, Long Island, is the home arena of New York Islanders of the National Hockey League. Coliseum officials have said they do not want to admit the Raiders because they fear the WHA club might take away some of the Islanders' fans.

Raiders' officials said a suit would be entered in court asking the Coliseum to show cause why the WHA team should not be allowed to hold its playoff games there.

The Raiders are forced to seek a new site for the playoffs because a circus has taken over Madison Square Garden for several weeks. The Raiders use the Garden for their regular-season games but under Garden contracts, only New York Rangers of the NHL and New York Knicks of the National Basketball Association can interrupt the circus.

Raiders, who have not yet clinched a playoff berth, claim the Coliseum is publicly owned and thus has no right to turn away revenue.

Swim Suits For Curlers

REGINA (CP) — Harvey Mazinke's heavily-favored Canadian contingent from Regina was among four rinks which managed to scramble through the first two rounds of the world curling championship undefeated Monday, despite ice conditions that United States skip Charles Reeves said made shot-making finesse an impossibility.

"This is the slowest ice I've ever seen," Reeves said after breaking even in this first two games, a performance that left him in a fifth-place tie with Scotland behind the 2-0 records of Canada, France, Switzerland and Sweden.

Heat generated by an array of television and film lights and sellout crowds of 4,500 at Regina Stadium took their toll on the five sheets of ice, creating conditions that baffled the curlers from 10 nations, particularly in the first round.

Steps were taken to improve the ice for the second draw Monday night including a total exchange of all the air in the arena through exhaust fans and open doorways, but Reeves said they did little good.

"It's unfortunate but this ice is basically unplayable," he said after the U.S. upset by France 8-7 in a first-round match that went to an extra end, bounced back to whip Scotland 10-4 in the second round.

"You just lean back and fire as hard as you can. There's no skill to what is going on out there."

Mazinke, striving for Canada's sixth consecutive world title, struggled to a 5-1 victory over Norway in the first round, but apparently solved the ice puzzle in the second draw and romped to a 11-1 triumph over Germany.

Scottish skip Alex F. Torrance, who disposed of Denmark, skipped by Viggo Hunaeus, 14-4 in the first round, also said the ice was the worst he'd even seen and Mazinke said it was bad.

"Sweeping is just tokenism," said U.S. third Doug Carlson. "All you're really doing is sweeping the dirt out of the puddles.

"We tried some takeouts and hogged the rock, not because we didn't throw our usual takeout weight but because the rocks just stopped in the water.

"When you're sweeping you splash your partner's face . . . we're going to come out in our bathing suits tomorrow."

French skip Pierre Boan said the deteriorating ice conditions in the first round ruled out skill as a deciding factor and termed his upset of the U.S. "just luck." France kept pace with Canada with a 10-4 waltz past Italy, skipped by Renato Ghezze, in the second round.

Stewart Quartet Unbeaten

TORONTO — The Gordon Stewart rink of Duncan, representing British Columbia, won its first two starts to share the first day's lead in the Royal Canadian Legion curling championships.

Stewart defeated Lou Dugre of Chatham, N.B., 12-5 and then edged Fred Dyke of Yarmouth, N.S., 8-7 to join Ontario and Manitoba as the undefeated leaders.

Ontario's Harv Chappel upset Burley Townsend of Saskatchewan 5-4, then scored another 5-4 win over P.E.I. Manitoba's Al Lutomsky defeated Alberta 11-10 and then routed Newfoundland 12-4.

Dugre recently represented New Brunswick in the Canadian men's final.

Calles Rink Shares Lead

OTTAWA — Ada Calles of Kimberley was facing a crucial test today in the Canadian senior women's curling championship when she skipped her British Columbia rink against the Alberta quartet piloted by Betty Luco.

After three rounds of the 10-rink event for women over 50, the Kimberley and Lethbridge rinks had both posted three straight wins.

In Monday's second round, Mrs. Calles counted four on the first end and went on to down Nova Scotia 10-5. She opened with a three-ender in the next round and coasted past Ontario 11-3.

Wes Didn't Rate as Good Goalie

Weston W. Adams Sr., retired president of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, died Monday at Brookline, Mass.

Adams, who was 69, became president of the Bruins in 1936. The team had been founded in 1924 by his father, C. F. Adams.

Adams retired as president in 1969, to be succeeded by his son, Weston W. Adams, Jr. He retained his position as chairman of the board of the team.

Adams played hockey while an undergraduate at Harvard and described himself as "pound for pound the worst hockey goalie in the world."

Controversy over the Masters golf tournament flared anew in Washington, D.C., when black golfer Lee Elder charged that officials of the prestigious event "don't want a black to play in it" and have changed the rules to assure that no black qualifies.

Elder said Clifford Roberts, chairman of the annual event since 1934, "wants to keep it lily white as he's had it since it began . . .

"But I think they should break down the barrier and allow a black to play — me or someone else. I think I have qualified. I'm in the top 60 on the tour. I made $70,000-odd last year."

When blacks came close to qualifying in the past, Elder said the committee for the prestigious tournament in Augusta, Ga., changed the rules to make sure they didn't play.

Elder's problem is the opposite of one faced by another black pro, Pete Brown, who won a major American tournament a few seasons ago but wasn't invited to the Masters because he wasn't among the top money winners.

Since then, the Masters committee has changed its rules to eliminate any American golfer who hasn't won at least one of the 44 major PGA tourneys. It's now the only big U.S. event without the top-60 provision.

Sports Briefs

Elder, who won the Nigerian Open, hasn't finished No. 1 in a major U.S. event but would have been accepted under the rules that kept Brown out.

The committee used to allow former Masters winners a say in who should be invited, Elder noted, but after former champion Gary Player of South Africa suggested that Elder be invited the vote was taken away.

Brentwood Rowers Win Four

SEATTLE — Brentwood College won four out of seven events Sunday in an inter-school rowing regatta over a wind-whipped Lake Washington course.

Brentwood won the novice and lightweight eights as well as the lightweight and heavyweight fours.

Greenlake School beat the Canadian-champion Brentwood heavyweight eight squad by one length and picked up another victory in the girls' fours. Lakeside finished second in the girls' fours with Brentwood third.

The Brentwood heavyweight eights also finished second to a combined Greenlake and University of Washington freshmen team.

Blades Prove School and Hockey Can Mix

By BOB STRUMM
Saskatoon Star Phoenix

It used to be you couldn't tell junior hockey players without a program. Now you can't tell them anything. They're too smart.

Past history has painted professional hockey players as illiterate serfs, but that has changed.

Saskatoon Blades, who tied a record for the Western Canada Junior Hockey League with 101 points in the Eastern Division this season, are a prime case in point.

Coach Jackie McLeod's Blades have 10 scholars on their roster.

"It's a matter of discipline with tht kids, handling their studies and hocky responsibilities in the time available," McLeod explained.

McLeod is no stranger to tight schedules. He spent five seasons coping with one as coach of the Candaian Nationals.

"We encourage them to go to school," McLeod added. "Their tuition and books are paid for as well. I like to see a young man get up and around in the morning. Lying in bed all day, makes a man lazy.

"Going to school builds a man's character and, at the junior level, this is important," he continued. "They're still growing men."

Even the juniors who aren't long on grey material have become immune to the hard-sell pitch of the big-time. It seems every kid these days is smart enough to realize his own limitations. Instead of handling negotiations himself, there's always an agent as close as the nearest phone.

The WCHL's isn't trying to stick it to the professionals through education. On the contrary, junior hockey relies heavily on the co-operation of the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association for its existance.

This season, 84 of the 228 registered WCHL players are attending high school, university or technical colleges.

Considering the majority of the players are 18 and 19 years of age, the post-high school years, the figures are quite commendable. The educational sector represents 37 per cent of the player pool.

"Our league has always stressed education," says assistant executive-secretary Ed Chynoweth of Easkatoon "But the program has really accelerated in recent years. Trades have been arranged to move a player out of a non-university city if he, in fact, wants to attend college."

Some club owners still are reluctant to send their players classward, believing an ancient myth that you couldn't combine hockey and education and still be a winner. After all, winning is the name of the game.

But the Blades aren't the only team putting the lie to that statement.

Two other Eastern contenders lead the league in education. Brandon Wheat Kings have 15 players either in high school or college, and Regina Pats have eight players in a similar role.

In the Western Division, fourth-place New Westminster Bruins have 11 players in school. Edmonton Oil kings, in first place, have five players who spend half their day in the classrooom.

Calgary Centennials are low club on the educational totem pole with only four players studying. The four teams out of the playoff picture — Winnipeg, Swift Current, Victoria and Vancouver — have five players apiece in school, a rather low scholastic count.

Transfers and New Rule Stir Inter-Club Worries

Leo Derman will not come right out and say it, but he is worried that Gorge Vale may have trouble defending the Willie Park Driver. Rather than cause dissension in the ranks, the Hawk suggests "this will be a rebuilding year" in the Inter-Club Golf League.

Gone are the Clarksons, Reg to a new posting in Vancouver and brother Vince to tend Gregarah's nine-hole layout. Greg Candlish has been informed of a business transfer to Boston, and the appearances of Willingdon Cupper Dave Mick may be limited because of dental studies.

The unofficial non-playing coach and No. 1 worrier, Derman is certain the Gorge will exercise its option to use driving-range professional Laurie Carroll and that resident pro Earl Davies and Dick Austin will be returning to form the nucleus. High hopes ride with youngsters like Bob Beauchemin, Steve Allan and Grant Milliken.

If Leo is so worried, I wonder why he hasn't given spring training a thought? B.C. Lions once enjoyed the facilities at Royal Roads and Skip Schamehorn, the phys-ed instructor with Esquimalt's troops, whipped Los Angeles Kings into shape by running the hockey players around Beacon Hill Park at 6 in the morning.

Don't be worried, Leo. Be an innovator.

Uplands will stand pat with the likes of Don Billsborough, Bob Hunt, Mike Gray, Ken Nott and the Burrells, Keith and Robin.

Colwood's new gain is Cedar Hill's loss. Brian Gandy, the new member, and assistant pro Scott Keenlyside will add new strength to Colwood's team, which will also include regulars Lawrie Kerr, Bruce Pellmore, Ken Floyd and the Ron Howards, Sr. and Jr.

Apart from Gandy's departure, no great changes at Cedar Hill. Greg Barnes, Bruce and Gord Rands, Rick Truman, Ron Cush, Ron Griffis and Doug Hunt to shoulder the load.

The new rule that restricts use of "paid pro shop employees" to one at a time will hurt both Glen Meadows and Victoria Club.

It means Dick Silverberg and Bill Penny will take turns alternating, but Mike Pyke, a one-time performer with Alberta's Willingdon Cup teams, has joined in time to give Glen Meadows some consolation. Al Zimmerman, a member and not a paid employee, Hal Jacobsen, Brian Sluggett and Marty Richards are back.

Dunc Conrad, George Bigelow, Bill Thompson, Doug Munro and Bill McColl will serve Victoria but captain Fred Frewer may have difficulty acquiring depth and balance by being forced to choose between Paul Trapp, Mike Parker and Rob Ferguson.

WINNER of 15 of last 16 singles finals on women's pro tennis tour, Australian Margaret Court (above) is scheduled to tackle former Wimbledon men's singles champion Bobby Riggs, 55, in a winner-take-all duel for $10,000 on May 13. Match will be televised live on CBS. Mrs. Court stepped in to represent ladies when Billie Jean King declined challenge by Riggs to play best-of-three-sets contest for cash.

Keating Wins Hammer Toss

SEATTLE — Two of the three B.C. winners at the University of Washington invitational track and field meet Sunday are former Vancouver Island athletes.

Murray Keating, a Victorian now attending Simon Fraser University, won the hammer throw with a toss of 202 feet, 10 inches.

John Hawkins, formerly of Courtenay and now living in Vancouver, cleared six-foot-eight to top the high jump competition.

Rick Hughson of the University of British Columbia won the steeplechase.

Logical Response For Flying Bench

Throw a bench onto the ice and what's the logical response?

A bench penalty, of course.

That turned out to be one of the plays Monday as New Westminister Bruins edged Vancouver Nats 3-2 in a riotous Western Canada Junior Hockey League game at Vancouver.

Elsewhere, Dennis Sobchuk and Regina Pats ended their season with a flourish, jumping into a 5-0 lead then holding on to defeat Edmonton 6-3 and prevent the Oil Kings from solidifying first place in the Western Division.

Brawling punctuated the Vancouver game in the first and second periods, and the bench came out of the Nats' player box in the third when referee Bob Kolari disallowed what appeared to be a tying goal by Vancouver.

With goalie Jack Cummings off the ice in favor of a sixth attacker, Randy Andreachuk scored at 19:53 but Kolari ruled a Vancouver player had pushed the puck ahead with his hand. The goal was disallowed. While Nats protested, two players picked up the bench and heaved it almost to centre ice.

Leeds-Arsenal Repeat Possible in Cup Final

LONDON (Reuter) — A repeat of last year's English Football Association Cup final between Leeds United and Arsenal is a possibility following the semi-final draw Monday.

Leeds, the cup-holders, will play Wolverhampton Wanderers, who have yet to concede a goal in this season's competition. The winner of tonight's sixth-round replay between Arsenal and Chelsea will meet the only second division survivor, Sunderland.

Semi-finals will be played April 7.

If Leeds and Arsenal survive, it will be the first time since 1884 and 1885 that the same teams have met in successive finals. The teams involved then were Queen's Park and Blackburn Rovers.

Arsenal is seeking to reach the final fvor a third successive year, which would be a record.

Meanwhile, Glasgow rivals Rangers and Celtic, who have won the Scottish Football Association Cup 41 times between them, could meet in this year's final May 5 after being kept apart in Monday's semi-final draw.

Rangers were drawn to meet Ayr United in the first semi-final (April 4) while Celtic will play Dundee (April 7) if it beats Aberdeen in their quarter-final replay.

Celtic, which played a goal-less quarter-final draw with Aberdeen Saturday, is seeking to complete its third successive league and cup double.

But Rangers, enjoying a revival after six years without capturing either of the two major domestic trophies, also entertain double hopes. They are level with Celtic at the the top of the Scottish First Division after winning their last 10 league games.

Fourth Straight For Restoration

Restoration Services are restoring respectability to their record in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League.

Season-long accupants of the cellar, Restoration moved to within two points of third place Monday be defeating YMCA 64-55 att Oak Bay High School. It was Restoration's fourth straight victory.

John Hart and Tom Hatcher powered Restoration, playing with only six men. Hart dropped in 24 points while Hatcher contributed 20.

Gary Woodburn topped YMCA with 17 points while Wayne Allen added 14.

RESTORATION SERVICES (64) — Tom Hatcher 20, John Hart 24, Al Martyn 8, Jim Hale 6, Dave Price 4, Rich Woodrow 2.

YMCA (55) — Garry Andrews 10, Jim Cunningham 4, Gary Woodburn 17, Bruce Lubinich 6, Robin Allen 2, Wayne Allen 14, Paul Drummond 2.

Silver's Rink Tops Playdown

Art Silver skipped Scotty Anderson, Les Thornley and Graham Sled to an 11-6 victory over George Inglis on Monday to win an 18-rink double-loss elimination playdown for a berth in the over-60 provincial senior men's curling championship.

The eight-rink B.C. round-robin playoff starts Sunday at Victoria Curling Club.

Marine Facilities Priority Item For Island Plan

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Vancouver Island should place a much higher priority on development of marine facilities, provincial trade and commerce deputy minister Leslie Hempsall said Monday.

See also Page 16.

He was one of four panel members discussing a blueprint for Vancouver Island at the convention of Island chambers of commerce at The Empress.

The convention concludes today.

Hempsall said development of marine facilities is "an extremely important consideration which transcends the priority it now receives."

High priority should be placed upon port development, marine repair and maintenance services, fishing fleet mooring, shipbuilding and small pleasure boat manufacture.

"These are all things that we do well and we are in a unique geographical situation to become world leaders."

Hempsall said it is shocking that no place could be found in the Victoria area for mooring the fishing fleet, an important economic activity as well as a tourist attraction.

Also serious to the economic future of the region, he said, is the drain of boilermakers from 850 down to 450 when Victoria should be reversing the trend and becoming a major shipbuilding centre.

Hempsall said port development is vital for the whole island and every small community wants and needs industrial development to stop the flow of young people to the larger cities.

Clean Industry

There is no point in launching a campaign for only clean secondary industries — what the island needs is a mix of heavy and light industries.

"Instead of being against heavy industry, we should try to attract it — but it should be heavy industry that does not pollute."

Industries particularly suited to the island would include manufacture of heavy water, development of crafts, expansion of research facilities and colleges and further development of agriculture.

The advantages of the island, he said, are its scenic attractions of water and mountains, its comparatively small populatin of 382,000, its proximity to 1.17 million people in the Vancouver area, its mineral and forest resources, its supply of deuterium for manufacture of heavy water, its agricultural development and especially its long coastline.

Some Drawbacks

Its chief drawbacks which must be considered in drawing up a blueprint for the island include:

"It does not have unobstructed access into a large market. There is no point for many companies establishing on Vancouver Island if the Vancouver area is the market to be entered.

"It does not have a general high level of technical expertise."

Panel chairman Arnold Webb, recently retired deputy minister of public works, said the key question for Vancouver Island would be to try to determine what level of population it could support.

Another panel member, Howard Paish of Vancouver, said instead of seeking a blueprint, chambers of commerce should be planning a "greenprint" for the island — a plan that put a major emphasis upon preserving environmental values.

He said that six years ago an environmentalist would not have been invited to speak on a panel of Vancouver Island development, concern for ecological values was a very new development.

He said some young people are carrying the new concerns to unreasonable lengths, however, and environmental values had to be weighed against the need to develop the economy.

HEMPSALL
. . . "become world leaders"

Some kind of trade-offs and compromises are needed. For example, the only sure way to protect the forest environment of Vancouver Island is to halt all logging. But that is not practical nor desirable.

Some environmentalists who are too cautious will end up strangling all growth and society will suffer.

Fast Growing

"They should come down from cloud 9," he said.

Paish supported Hempsall's declaration that Vancouver Island should put a higher priority on marine development and Paish called for a provincial department of marine resources.

liam Stavely of Victoria, William Stavely of Victoria, Island planning supervisor for B.C. Tel, outlined his company's projections of population growth for the island.

In the next 30 years the island population will rise to a maximum of 895,000 from 382,000 with the number of homes increasing to 295,000 from 122,000.

Stavely said that in percentage terms the Campbell River region has been and will continue to be the fastest growing section of the island.

In 1971 the population of that section of the island was 58,000 with a growth rate of 4.27 per cent. In 30 years it will be 191,000 at a growth rate of 4.08 per cent.

The middle section of the island, centred at Nanaimo, had a population of 119,000 in 1971 and a growth rate of 2.8 per cent. In 30 years it will be 272,000, with the same growth rate.

The southern Victoria region had a 1971 population of 269,000 and a growth rate of 2.6 per cent. In 30 years this will more than double to 430,000 at a growth rate of 2.5 per cent, according to the company's projections.

Team Effort

Fourth panel member was Dr. Gordon Stead of the University of British Columbia department of community and regional planning.

He said the chamber should remember it had to run its blueprint and not let the blueprint run the chamber and planning had to be done as a team effort it if was to be effective and successful.

People brought up in the depression sometimes continue to look upon economic development as the most important factor, he said.

It is the younger generation, born in affluence, that is reminding us that we now have enough money as a society to be able to afford the luxury of making choices as to what kinds of development we want, he said.

FULFORD HARBOR BUSIEST RUN

Steady increases in ferry traffic to the Gulf Islands have been registered over the last several years, figures tabled in the legislature Monday show.

In answer to a question from Hugh Curtis (PC—Saanich-and-the-Islands), Highways Minister Robert Strachan gave figures for the Swartz Bay-Fulford Harbor, Crofton-Vesuvius and Tsawwassen-Long Harbor runs.

The most heavily-used run was the Swartz Bay-Fulford Harbor run with the following figures for these years: 1969—71,007 crs; 1971 — 85,627; 1972 — 94,178.

Next most popular was the Crofton-Vesuvius run: 1969 — 48,917; 1971 — 56,718; 1972 — 62,338.

The Tsawwassen-Long Harbor run had the least amount of traffic: 1967 — 11,811; 1969 — 17,180; 1971 — 23,529; 1972 — 26,737.

Block Bros. To Appeal

A B.C. Supreme Court decision, ordering Block Bros. Realty Ltd. and Otto Zilkie to carry out a contract and pay $2,000 damages to a prospective purchaser, will be appealed, lawyer Cecil Branson said Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Sangster, 211-2025 Oak Bay Ave., represented by Robert Price, claimed damages for fraudulent misrepresentations made by Block Bros. Realty Ltd., and Zilkie, of 895 Tiswilde, concerning the sale of a 14-suite apartment block in Victoria.

Evidence given during seven days of testimony was that the Sangsters understood the Camdora Apartments, 1301 Pandora, to be 12 years old.

It was proved they were actually 15 years old and therefore of less value.

A price of $112,000 had been agreed upon and Block Bros. offered to buy property owned by Sangster in Mill Bay and to provide a $12,000 interest-free loan to help finance the apartment building.

After Sangster launched the suit, Block Bros. refused to advance the money unless he dropped his charges.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wooton ruled that the Sangsters fully expected to close the matter at the appointed time and were prevented from doing so by the actions of Block Bros.

Wooton ordered specific performance of the contract.

He also ordered the $2,000 damages be "applied on the account of the purchase."

Branson said he has been advised in writing that Vancouver lawyer David Freeman, representing Zilkie, is in agreement with the appeal which is expected to be heard in Victoria next fall.

Leader Carried Away On Bill: Nanaimo Grits

Provincial Liberal leader David Anderson has been "getting carried away" with his criticism of the controversial land commission bill, the president of the Nanaimo Liberal Association said Monday.

The association executive announced its support for the land bill, and reminded Anderson and other Liberals that the B.C. Liberal convention approved a resolution in May 1971 calling on the party to adopt a policy of "preserving fertile farm areas at all costs."

"We're just reminding Anderson of party policy," said association president Peter McCue. "He has been getting carried away."

In a statement the association executive said it supported the principle of Bill 42 and "urges the leader of the B.C. Liberal party to contribute to its improvements and public acceptance by amendments compatible to the interests of all."

Anderson replied Monday that if the Nanaimo Liberals think MLAs should support the principle of Bill 42, then they don't understand the principle of the bill.

During debate of principle it wasn't possible to separate the principle of "preserving farmland by means of a dictatorial commission", the real principle of the bill, he said.

Debate on the bill has been on its "dictatorial aspects", said Anderson — "lack of compensation, lack of natural justice, lack of public hearings, lack of due process."

The decision of the Nanaimo association didn't worry him, Anderson, said.

"The local asssociations have the right to say what they like," he said. "We're a democratic party, and I'm glad they're saying what they think."

TENNIS MEETING

Saanich Tennis Club will kick off the season with a meeting and election of officers at 7:30 p.m. March 27 at Pearkes Arena.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved .... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Murder Hearing On April 16

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Randi Vincent Stevenson, 20, of Parksville, will remain in custody awaiting a preliminary hearing set for April 16 on a charge of non-capital murder.

Louise Myhres, 24, also of Parksville, charged with being an accessory after the fact, was free on $3,000 bail.

They were charged in connection with the death of Kent Tvede Laursen, 20, of Qualicum Beach, whose mutilated body was found in a shallow grave on East Thurbour Island on March 6.

$89,545 Award To V.I. Couple

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson of the B.C. Supreme Court Monday awarded Mr. and Mrs. Steve Kibzey of Courtenay, a total of $89,545 for injuries suffered in a two-car collision on Texada Island in 1969.

The award is against John Douglas Sudsbear of North Vancouver, B.C., driver of the other car.

Mr. Justice Hinkson awarded $52,500 to Mrs. Kibzey and $37,045 to her husband.

Think hockey's tough today? Not on your slapshot! You should have seen it way-back-when. A real man's game. And it called for a real man's beer. Old Style. Slow-brewed and naturally aged for big beer flavour. It's the one thing that doesn't change. Old Style's still a winner, year after year after year. Try it. You'll be a fan, too.

Old Style SLOW-BREWED AND NATURALLY AGED.

In the next ten years you'll pay about $180 too much to heat your water with oil.

(That's if oil prices don't go up. Again.)

Or, you can switch to a Cascade electric water heater. First of all, you'll get all the hot water you need. Silently. Dependably. You won't have to fret about fuel delivery. Nor will you have reason to worry about environmental damage. Electricity is clean.

Best of all, on Vancouver Island it's the most economical way to heat water automatically. Compared to oil-fired units, the total cost of a Cascade electric water heater works out to approximately $18.00 less a year.* (In some areas you could save over $21.00 a year.*)

If you think $4.13 a month to rent an oil-fired water heater sounds pretty reasonable, consider this: you'll pay only $1.16 a month to own a Cascade, over the next ten years.* And that's more than reasonable.

Last of all, every Cascade unit carries a ten-year guarantee on the tank. If you wish, convenient financing can be arranged through B.C. Hydro. No matter how you add it all up, you get a lot more than hot water when you switch to Cascade.

*Based on operating conditions and calculations detailed in B.C. Hydro Technical Bulletin CWH 1-73, available at all B.C. Hydro offices.

Cascade

All the more reason to switch: Cascade 60 now $50 off! Reg. retail price.

A Dash of the Revolutionary

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — The first symphonic orchestra from the western world ever to play in China received a rapturous reception when it made its debut before a Peking audience last night — especially when it threw a dash of Chinese revolutionary music into its repertoire of European classics.

A full house that ranged all the way from government leaders to ordinary soldiers with forage caps pulled down about their ears applauded enthusiastically as the London Philharmonic moved through a program of Elgar, Brahms and Beethoven.

But the longest applause of the night — two full minutes, an extraordinary ovation by the reticent standards of Chinese audiences — came when the orchestra played a selection from The Red Detachment of Women, China's principal revolutionary ballet.

A round of delighted murmuring swept through the 1,600-seat Bride of Heaven Theatre as the orchestra, playing the first of two encores, struck up the first bars of the most popular theme in the ballet.

Though the switch to revolutionary music was the highlight of the two-hour concert, it was evident from the response to other items in the program that there were plenty of people in the audience — among them a strong contingent from China's leading orchestra — who enjoyed hearing the music of some of Europe's great composers.

Apart from concert appearances by Two American pianists and a Swiss cellist who have played in Peking in recent months it was the first time that western classical music has been played before a Chinese audience since before the cultural revolution.

While a few in the audience stifled yawns and one or two actually appeared to doze off, the vast majority listened attentively. Some even brought old mother-of-pearl opera glasses to get a better look at the 90-member orchestra.

John Pritchard, conductor of the orchestra, said afterwards that he had been rather nervous before the concert about the audience reaction but had been delighted to find that the people who came were "extremely musical."

"They were not just excited by the loud music — that's easy, people all over the world are excited by loud music—but by the softer pieces too. They seemed to be very informed."

ESSIHOS IN RECITAL

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A lunch hour recital at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria Monday featured Victoria's George Essihos in a program of familiar classical piano pieces.

The pianist has been away for several years, engaged in a night club career in the northwest United States.

He now lives in Victoria and is returning to his primary musical interest.

The program consisted principally of Debussy and Chopin works with a touch of the Spanish and Russian of Albeniz and Rachmaninoff.

There was also a composition of his own — Egyptian Tombs—which was imaginative, interesting and imbued with the spirit of jazz.

Essihos's technical competence is impressive. He has power and high digital dexterity, so that the great chords of Debussy's Submerged Cathedral, the purling passage work of Reflections in the Water and the passionate virtuosity of Chopin's B flat minor Scherzo come off brilliantly.

But the musical detail is less meticulous, the sensitivity and taste which marked his work in the past, has eroded. He tends to over-pedal and over-exploit the virtuoso aspects.

This was particularly noticeable in the surprisingly unpoetic and rushed interpretation of Chopin's reflective E major Etude.

The impressionistic atmosphere in the Debussy numbers suffered somewhat from the same technical exploitation.

Hopefully this gifted and capable artist will settle down to thinking out musical content in greater depth and will find his way back to the poetry, refinement of touch and the adroitness of pedal and phrase that were notable qualities of his previous concert work.

Heart Ransom Rejected by Oratory

MONTREAL — St. Joseph's Oratory authorities decided to reject ransom demands of $50,000 for the return of a glass-encased heart because "if we had given in to them, it would have led to an endless problem.

"Besides, the idea of buying or selling a heart is in very poor taste, especially the heart of someone like Brother Andre," said Rev. Bernard Lafreniere.

LONDON — Liza Minelli and Desi Arnaz Jr. arrived today for a five-day visit saying "we are hoping to get married in the very near future."

The daughter of Judy Garland and the son of Lucille Ball said the marriage would not take place while they were here but "it is not going to be kept a secret — when we have the exact date we will let everybody know."

HUMBOLDT, Neb. — Sheri Weiler, a Michigan mother of four, found out that a pig sty is no bed of roses.

"Every bone in my body aches," Mrs. Weiler said Sunday after winning a bet she had made with Humboldt farmer Dale James to spend one day working among his 1,200 hogs. "I need a gallon of muscle medicine."

Mrs. Weiler, who called for a national meatless week to protest high meat prices, came to this Nebraska farm country armed with statistics on high meat prices after accepting a challenge by James to work a day on his farm and see why prices have soared.

When asked if Mrs. Weiler became more enlightened on farm life during her work day Saturday, James said, "I think she did."

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Sammy Davis Jr. offered Monday to post bond money for 16 persons, mostly Indians, who were arrested by the FBI Saturday as they drove truckloads of supplies meant for the militants holding Wounded Knee, S.D.

"I realize there is an embarassment to the government," said Davis, who campaigned for President Nixon.

"If they are guilty or innocent, that ain't my business," he said, but "if that law really works then nobody can ever help another person if they are doing something to help the dignity of their race."

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Lauritz Melchior, 83, Danish-born tenor who became one of the top Wagnerian heroic tenors of all time, died here Sunday.

Melchior died at St. John's Hospital. He earlier had undergone surgery for a gall bladder ailment, a hospital spokesman said.

PLYMOUTH, England — Alison Mollins decided she would no longer share a bed with her husband Ron and the busty nude.

It wasn't so much the nude that upset Mrs. Mollins, 27. It was the fact that the nude is located just above her own name as another tattoo on his leg.

Mollins compromised. Another tattoo artist put a see-through nightie on the nude.

LOS ANGELES — Sharif Sirhan, 39, elder brother of the man who is serving a life term for killing Senator Robert Kennedy, was indicted Monday on a charge of threatening the life of Israel Premier Golda Meir.

The elder Sirhan is alleged to have written a letter Feb. 18 to U.S. State Secretary William Rogers containing the threat.

BIRMINGHAM, England — A 16-year-old boy was sentenced Monday to 20 years in prison and two 15-year-old boys to 10 years each in the mugging of a man last November.

The eldest boy, Paul Storey, had pleaded guilty to the attempted murder of Robert Keegan, 31, and robbing him of five cigarettes, 30 pence about 75 cents and a bunch of keys.

The other two boys, Mustafa Fuat and Joseph Duignan, pleaded guilty to wounding Keegan with intent to do grevious bodily harm.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 26-year-old man who "didn't remember too much" about taking a swing at a policeman March 11 was fined $100 by Judge William Ostler in Victoria provincial court Monday.

Harry Cook, 1021 Empress, pleading guilty to a charge of assaulting a police officer, told the court he was "pretty drunk" when stopped by police in the early hours of the morning.

Cook and another man had been stopped by police, investigating a complaint of a break-in at Princesss and Cook. The accused was told to sit in the rear of the police patrol car, but insted, he hit the police officer in the face.

The man was then subdued by police and put into the back of the patrol vehicle.

Frank Galley, 18, of 728 Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence and placed on six months' probation after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

Galley was stopped at 4:15 a.m. Sunday by city police in the 1300 block Douglas and was found to have a small quantity of marijuana on him.

Samuel Frederick Staverman, 18, of 2342 Bellamy, was fined $75 for possession of a plastic bag containing marijuana when he was stopped by Saanich police March 16.

Staverman's arrest followed a complaint which led police to the Town and Country shopping plaza parking lot.

Murray Steven Smith, 26, of 1731 Albert, was committed for trial in county court on a charge of possession of heroin after a preliminary hearing.

Robert Johnstone, 17, of 3900 Metchosin, was fined $350 in provincial court Saturday for impaired driving Friday night. Johnstone's licence was also suspended for a period of two months, except for business purposes.

In trial court, Gordon Matthew Seykora, 31, of Vancouver, was found guilty of stealing food items, valued at $4.98, from a Safeway store Nov. 17. The man was fined $250 by Judge F. S. Green.

Don't Sell Land Bennett Tells B.C. Farmers

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett Monday called upon farmers to hang on to their land until the next provincial election when a new government will take the freeze off subdivisions.

He said announcement of the provincial government's land bill had already reduced value of farm lands—value of one Okanagan farm has gone down from $52,000 to $22,000 since the bill was introduced.

"I say to farmers, do not sell a single acre to the provincial government at these depressed prices because freedom will be restored in this province within three or four years."

The provincial government has introduced legislation that could prevent some farmers from subdividing land zoned for agricultural purposes.

DEFENDS HIS POLICIES

In a speech to the convention of Vancouver Island chambers of commerce at The Empress, he defended farm protection policies of his former government, saying that from 1955 to 1972 agricultural land doubled, not in price, but in quantity.

The provincial government cleared more land for agricultural purposes every year than was taken out of production.

In a wide-ranging attack on the provincial government, he said the New Democratic Party was not a reform group but was bringing into the province the foreign idea of state socialism.

He said while socialist extremists in the Waffle group had been purged from the NDP in Ontario and in the federal party, they were in the government of British Columbia.

Bennett said Premier Barrett and several influential cabinet ministers are Waffle members.

He said when the thrust of Social Credit policies and the surplus left by his government begins to wear down two or three years from now, there could be "a calamity."

He said a major problem facing British Columbians is the continuing rise in prices that is threatening the value of currencies.

"Inflation is the only real enemy that commerce has, the only real enemy the worker has. If controls are needed then controls must be lived with."

ALERT TO DANGERS

He said businessmen should be alert to the dangers of inflation and hoped the time would not come when people had to drive to the store with a carload of money to buy the groceries.

Although he strongly attacked the provincial government, Bennett's speech was generally low-keyed as he reminisced about his recent political career.

He made several references to religion and said he had never denied a quote attributed to him that he was plugged in to God because, he said, to deny it would imply he did not believe in the power of prayer.

"I believe in prayer and I pray now for the future of our province."

He received two standing ovations from the crowd of 250, one when he was introduced and another at the close of his speech.

Orderly Development for Island 'Vital'

HOLMES
. . . elected president

Victoria realtor Philip Holmes Monday night was sworn in as new president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island.

He succeeds Betty Deacon of Chemainus.

Holmes, who had been first vice-president of the association, was elected by acclamation. He is a past-president of Victoria Chamber.

In an interview, he said orderly economic development was vital for the future of the Island and the search for an economic blueprint for the Island would be a major goal for the association over the next 12 months.

Craig Reid of Qualicum was elected ifrst vice-president.

Les Hammer of Port Alberni was elected second vice-president.

Earlier in the day, the convention of Vancouver Island chambers at The Empress passed a resolution urging the provincial government to study the feasibility of a nuclear power station "at a suitable location on Vancouver Island.

The resolution was presented by Nanaimo Chamber of Commerce which is seeking a nuclear plant at that city.

The resolution states that power transmission from the mainland by cable is not reliable and alternate sources of thermal power are not practical for the Island.

The convention passed a resolution presented by Tofino-Long Beach Chamber of Commerce asking the provincial government to set up an authority to deal with tourist spillover on to unprotected lands outside Pacific Rim National Park.

In other resolutions:

The federal government was urged to establish a hatchery or spawning channel on the west coast of the Island, preferably at Kennedy Lake or the Nitinat water system.

The provincial government was urged to declare Whiffin Spit near Sooke as a class B park and to restore and maintain it as a breakwater.

The provincial government was urged to crack down on unsightly premises along the Island highway, ordering the removal of rotting buildings or forcing owners to shield them from the public view.

The convention voted in favor of a community beautification contest with the chambers awarding a suitable prize to the winning community.

Less Uncertain Future Wanted

There is a feeling of uncertainty in the forestry industry despite increased revenues in 1972, B.C. Forest Products vice-president Donald Saunders said in Victoria Monday night.

He was addressing the annual banquet of Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island at The Empress.

Saunders said world competition was increasing in lumber sales and the B.C. industry had to have the export market to survive.

"Added to this disturbing situation, we have a new provincial government apparently determined to exact more revenue from an industry hard pressed to improve its competitive position in world markets," he said.

"With approximately 95 per cent of the forest land owned by the Crown, the influence government has on the industry is obvious. Is there any wonder there is a feeling of uncertainty within the industry!"

He said provincial tree farm licences, particularly on Vancouver Island, had enabled the industry to log efficiently on a sustained yield basis.

"If this incentive is lost, we could have mediocre management rather than intensive management of forest lands," Saunders said.

He said the forestry industry's profit on its investment fell from 6 per cent in 1966 to 2 per cent in 1971.

"Despite a marked recovery in 1972, early indications are the return will be less than 5 per cent. How many of you operating your own business would be satisfied with a return of less than 5 per cent on the capital employed in it?"

New world competition, he said, would come from enormous tree plantations in South Africa, New Zealand, Australia and Brazil. Some countries that had bought lumber in past now were becoming exporters themselves.

Pensioners Quizzed

Recipients of Mincom old age security cheques are being asked to describe their outside income on a questionnaire mailed with their cheques.

The mailing began about 10 days ago and will continue with other mailings, a provincial government official said Monday.

The official said completion of the form is voluntary and pointed out that the form tells Mincom recipients the information will in no way affect their eligibility for the $200 guaranteed income.

He said information gained from the questions will be used to aid accounting necessary for working out cost-share amounts that come from Ottawa, which finances the largest portion of old age security payments.

The information will also be used to discover the needs of people receiving the cheques, and for future planning of welfare services.

Eligibility for old age security supplements is decided through other methods.

Chinatown Can Be Saved

Hidden Behind its Shop Facades A 'Socio-Psychological Well' Revives the Chinese Community Says University Geographer

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

The days of Victoria's Chinatown are numbered, according to University of Victoria geographer Dr. Chuen-Yan Lai, but the area can still be rescued.

The two chief menaces to Chinatown's survival are redevelopment projects nearby and the willingness of the dwindling number of Chinese property owners to sell out, Lai says.

At the same time, unlike Chinatowns in other Canadian cities, Victoria's has not yet deteriorated beyond rescue.

Over-all rehabilitation of the area, which is running down, "would accomplish the goal of creating a viable historic identity," Lai says in Residential and Neighborhood Studies in Victoria, a new university publication.

Lai says a study of Chinatowns in North America found that the minimum conditions for the survival of a Chinatown are: a city population of 50,000 or more, a diversified economy, and a Chinese population of 250 or more in the area where the Chinatown exists.

"If these requirements are valid, the days of Victoria's Chinatown are numbered, because its population is decreasing and its economic activities are rather limited," Lai says.

"The chief menace to its continued existence is its situation between the Inner Harbor renewal area and the two vacant city blocks which are owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and will soon be developed," Lai says.

(A city planning official said the CPR now owns one city block in the area, bounded by Discovery, Chatham, Government and Store. No plans for development of the lot have been submitted to the city.)

However, if these projects go ahead, land values in the three main Chinatown blocks will rise considerably and owners will be tempted to sell out, Lai says.

The three main Chinatown blocks are bounded by Store, Pandora, Fisgard, Douglas and Herald.

"Although Chinese, who seem to be apathetic, still own about 70 per cent of the properties in Chinatown, they will likely sell them to the highest bidders and will retain less and less control over its destiny," Lai says.

The main reasons for the decline of Chinatown, according to Lai, are the assimilation of young Chinese into Canadian culture and the death of old residents.

"Old Chinatowns which are usually situated in the core or on the fringe of downtown commercial areas, have high land values but are unattractive to the increasingly middle-class Chinese residents," Lai says.

The chief value of Victoria's Chinatown is not in Fisgard Street itself, Lai says, "but in what is behind its shop facades: the old, brick buildings and intricate networks of picturesque, narrow alleys and arcades."

"This hidden section of Chinatown, unknown to the public, is looked upon by the Chinese as a socio-psychological well to which they can return and refresh themselves."

Today the population in Chinatown is down to only 587, according to census figures quoted by Lai, and approximately 75 per cent of the population is Chinese.

THE SPRING EQUINOX was at 10:13 a.m. today, and little girls' minds swing to romping among daffodils, nuzzling up to new-born lambs and other spring-like rites. Dawn and Christy, 22-month-old twins of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Mehain of Williams Lake, celebrate spring's arrival by a gambol in Beacon Hill Park. They're here to visit their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Haines.

44% Increase In Budget For Region

Capital Regional District directors today began consideration of a 1973 budget of $2,545,996, up 44.1 per cent over the previous annual budget.

The 1972 annual budget was $1,766,153, but directors were told the probable expenditure last year was $1,870,037.

Major expenditures this year are (1972 budget figures in brackets):

—Sewer debt charges, $609,146 ($230,000).

—Regional parks, $390,336 ($345,000).

—Legislative and general government, $292,700 ($194,550).

—Juan de Fuca Ice Arena and recreational complex, $239,291 ($206,858).

—Municipal Finance Authority debt service, $237,457 ($132,734).

—Planning services, $231,800 ($160,700).

A move to increase the annual stipend of the chairman to $4,500 from $2,000 was referred to the executive committee after Victoria Ald. Tom Christie said it should be looked into.

WORK LOAD INCREASING

Board chairman Jim Campbell foresaw two to three days work a week for this year and Sooke director Howard Elder said, "certainly the chairman's workload is increasing."

Project Recycle, the volunteer organization now taken over by the regional district, came under close scrutiny with a budgeted expenditure of $21,000.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said the project has "turned into a monster. The volunteers have taken off."

He said it is time directors looked at the feasibility of continuing Projecty Recycle because it is losing money.

The region's executive director, Dennis Young, said a report is being prepared on the feasibility of recycling project and the report will be ready by the end of the month.

Campbell said directors can decide on continuing or discontinuing Project Recycle in the next few months after the feasibility report is received.

TAKING OVER as new executive director at Victoria General Hospital is Jim Fair, 39, former director of diagnostic services at Vancouver General Hospital.

Nuns Still There

Three dissident nuns continued their sit-in at St. Mary's Priory today, claiming they have been denied a chance to continue their work among the elderly ill.

For the third night in a row the sisters, from the Society for the Love of Jesus, slept Monday night in sleeping bags on the floor of a basement dining room.

They were locked last Thursday from the Priory house where they have lived for about 20 years, the latest outbreak in a long-standing dispute with another faction for control of the small order and its assets, estimated at $1.5 million in land and securities.

But the three entered the house from the rear, despite security guards, and have refused to budge since. Most of the house is locked to them and now both sides have security guards.

★

The three — Sisters Mary Agnes Eaton, Mary Josephine Donvan and Mary Lucy Ford — are supported by Mother Mary Cecilia, founder of the order and bead of it for 40 years.

Heading the other faction is Sister Leonette Hoesing, whom the dissidents say is not legally the mother prioress because she was improperly elected two years ago with invalid proxy votes.

Sister Mary Agnes Eaton said today the dissidents have in the past been repeatedly denied a chance by sister Leonette to continue their work in the order.

"We would gladly work if it was given to us . . . she would rather hire people from outside than give work to us."

A 71-bed extended care hospital is situated on the priory grounds and St. Anthony's Home for senior citizens is directly across the road.

Sister Leonette declined today to make further comment in the dispute.

Oak Bay to Go Ahead On Centre Without Vote

Oak Bay council will go ahead with plans for its $1.6 million recreation complex without going to the ratepayers with a referendum.

Council, with one exception, voted Monday night to apply for the $766,667 loan under the federal government's winter capital projects fund without first calling for a referendum.

Ald. Brian Smith noted that it was not necessary for the deputy minister of municipal affairs to receive unanimous approval for bypassing of the referendum to approve the loan. He said if the deputy minister received an indication of "strong" support by council this was all that was necessary.

Ald. John Goult was the only one to oppose the move.

After stating that he was convinced that this was the time to build a centre and that a "happy financial arrangement" coupled with the need for the centre made the timing opportune, Goult said:

"Council's proposal, in my opinion, should be placed before the electorate. It (a referendum on borrowing large sums of money) is basic to democracy. The referendum is well entrenched in our law."

He said he was convinced that a referendum "would be substantially passed if explained. What then is the fear of going to the electorate?"

He said the figure of $50,000 a month quoted as being lost if work was not carried out between December and May was exaggerated.

Both Smith and Ald. Douglas McLelland said that to keep within the $1.6 million estimate it might be necessary to build only the ice rink and swimming pool, leaving out the curling park and parking facility for 125 cars.

McLelland, a member of the special recreation committee, said that from now on all meetings of the committee will be open to both press and the public.

He said he realized the "great pressure on all people on fixed incomes" but said that, a centre being "totally essential," this was the best opportunity for people on fixed incomes to get one and pay low taxes.

Smith noted "referendums at this time of year are not well attended and usually a small number decide for the rest."

Apart from the loan, the centre will be financed with a $333,333 provincial grant and $500,000 in federal government "forgiveness" for on-site labor.

McLelland suggested that a development competition be held with teams of contractors and designers bidding for the job. He said this would help in setting cost limits and cut down on time.

Council agreed to consider this type of competition, providing it met with the approval of the provincial and federal governments.

Later in the meeting, council received a letter from A. C. Chatten, of 2232 Windsor, enclosing a cheque for $100 as his contribution to the costs of the working drawings for the centre.

Smith observed, "This is a most generous donation. It's good to see that he sees fit to put his money where his mouth is."

CONSTRUCTION DELAYED ON NEW REC CENTRE

Work will start April 15 on the $1.3 million recreation centre on Mount Newton Crossroad in Central Saanich.

A spokesman for Western Recreational Resources Ltd. said today a start has been delayed by wet weather and incomplete engineering drawings.

He said the land-use contract signed with the municipality allows for a reasonable extension of the Aug. 31 completion date.

Concern over the delay was expressed at a council meeting Monday night.

Western Recreational is composed of private businessmen, mostly Saanich Peninsula residents.

Alex Izaat, who has represented the company in negotions with council, has been temporarily sidelined by ill health. He did confirm however, that there is no financial holdup.

The contract is planned to contain a 15-metre swimming pool, a full-sized skating rink and a sheet of curling ice.

Acute Nurse Shortage

Victoria's two major acute care hospitals have reported an "unusually high" shortage of nurses for this time of year.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital has about 30 vacancies for registered and practical nurses, the Victoria General about 16 or 17 vacancies, said spokemen for the two hospitals.

"If it's beginning to show up so much now, what's going to happen in the summer?" asked Royal Jubilee nursing director Elizabeth Moore.

Nursing shortages usually become more serious in summer months when many nurses go on holidays, take courses, ask for transfers or stay home with children out of school.

Plans are under way to hold a spring refresher course for nurses in Victoria, said a spokesman for the Registered Nurses Association of British Columbia, but financing of the course hasn't been determined.

The association says the nurse shortage is province-wide. In January there were 172 nursing vacancies in B.C., compared with 114 last year and 40 the year before.

A "Come to B.C." ad has been placed in the national Canadian Nurse magazine and an eastern daily newspaper.

Injured Seaman In Hospital

A seaman aboard the Liberian freighter Asteri who was hurled against the ship's superstructure in Sunday's storm, has been taken to the merchant seamen's Hanna Clinic in Vancouver.

A spokesman at the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre in CFB Esquimalt said today it was not necessary to airlift 42-year-old Georgio Birris, since the ship had contacted a Vancouver doctor by radio-telephone, who had prescribed treatment for the man. The ship was 700 miles at sea.

It was first thought the seaman was suffering from a ruptured kidney but by assessing the symptoms given him the doctor was able to diagnose that Birris is suffering from a broken rib over the kidney.

The Asteri docked at Vancouver just before noon today.

Man Fined $500 In Arson Case

A 50-year-old Victoria man was fined $500 and placed on 18 months probation in Victoria provincial court today for setting fire to his former fiance's garage.

Patrick Howard Charles Tripp, 4052 Cedar Hill Crossroad, pleaded guilty Feb. 26 to setting fire to the garage at 920 Darwin.

He told investigating Saanich detectives that he had set the Feb. 4 fire to show the woman she "needed him around to protect her."

Judge William Ostler termed the man's actions an "astonishing case" and considered the accused "emotionally immature." The judge said however, he was impressed by character evidence submitted by one of Tripp's neighbors and by his employer.

Ostler decided in favor of a fine and term of probation although he said the case came "close to the line" for a jail sentence.

Teachers' Time Off Under Fire

The abundance of holidays for school children caused by recent labor problems had Greater Victoria school board trustees Monday debating whether teachers should hold training seminars on their own time.

Discussion was sparked by a letter to the board from Frank Boddy, 310 Clifton, who lamented the fact that children lost another day of instruction Friday, Feb. 23, because of a teachers' convention.

The children, he said, have been "deprived of education facilities for three weeks due to labor troubles."

"As a taxpayer of this school district I would like to ask if it is possible to have teachers hold their meetings on days which do not conflict with teaching days," the letter said.

Trustee Walter Donald agreed with Boddy's argument. He referred to a seminar on social studies planned for this week which will take yet another hour of instruction time.

"At the risk of driving morale down to the ground, I have to admit, I was thrilled to receive Boddy's letter," said Donald.

"I don't begrudge teachers their hour. But this year we have been beset by time off for teachers. During the strike there was plenty of time for training seminars.

"I'm sure it's getting to the parents — time off for this and that. Boddy should get some response."

Trustee Hal Knight wondered about scheduling the seminars during the Christmas holidays.

Trustee William Ross argued that the teachers didn't have time for seminars during the strike.

"It's not true they had time. They were very busy."

Asked to explain the regulations, Superintendent A. J. Longmore said that out of a 200-day school year, seven days are allowed for these types of seminars.

He said he has instructed teachers that because of recent time lost, the social studies seminar will be the last such scheduled activity to be held within school hours. That does not include parent-teacher interviews, however, he said.

The board instructed that a reply be sent to Boddy and a copy be sent to the Greater Victoria Teachers Association.

Commenting on the discussion, GVTA president Bob Mitchell said today the complaints were "a lot of nonsense.

"If there were a lot of them (seminars) it might be a different situation," he said. "But people don't realize how many (seminar meetings take place on weekends already. When one's scheduled for during the week, it's usually because we can't fit it in on weekends.

"I know the strike posed a problem as far as time lost . . . but in most cases teachers are making their own arrangements to cover time lost during labor problems."

He suggested it is just as important for teachers to concentrate on the quality of the learning experience which is being upgraded by the seminars, as it is to concentrate on the quantity of time spent teaching.

Battered Child Syndrome Kept Hidden Under Rug

NEW YORK (AP) — Late one wintry night, Alice made a decision deep in her six-month-old mind that nearly cost her life.

She cried.

It wasn't a whisper or a soft sobbing. It was a full-blown wail. Whether she was hungry, grumpy or wet, no one will ever know.

Her mother, pregant with her second child, remembered lying in bed and beginning to hate. She hated Alice for her crying and herself for her hate. As the cries from the nursery crossed that line into shrill screams, Alice's mother also crossed a line in her mind.

She went to the kitchen, plopped a bottle into a pan filled with water and turned the flame on. After the water had come to a boil, she tested the formula on her forearm to make sure it wasn't too hot.

Then Alice's mother set the bottle aside on a counter and walked into the nursery with the pan of scalding water. She stood over the crib and poured the water on Alice, the child she had so desperately wanted through three barren years of marriage.

Bed clothing kept enough of the scalding water from reaching Alice's skin that she survived to join a sad army of children attacked and greviously hurt by their parents each year in the United States.

THOUSANDS DIE

No definitive national statistics exist for this dark side of North American family life, but many experts believe at least 65,000 children are seriously abused each year by adult attacks. About 25 per cent are said to be seriously, sometimes permanently, injured. Perhaps 6,000 are killed.

Dr. Richard Gladstone, a psychiatrist, calls such harsh physical abuse "one of the perversions of the human procreative drive."

Doctors, emergency hospital staff, social workers and judges list a grim variety of abuse: beating both with hands and weapons, kicking, torture, strangling, incest, rape other sexual abuses, suffocation, drowning, shooting, stabbing, scalding, burning, poisoning, dismemberment, starving, imprisonment, freezing and crushing.

"There is no act too violent or sadistic that has not been carried on some child, somewhere," an intern in a children's ward said.

Donna, 43 days old, was dead when she got to the hospital. A fall from her crib, the mother said. An autopsy showed "extensive multiple fractures of the skull, brain hemorrhaging," and other damage. The mother was charged with murder.

Robert, 9, was admitted to the emergency ward with second and third - degree burns to both hands. An accident, his father said at first. Later it was discovered Robert's hands were thrust over gas stove flames as punishment for stealing money.

ANGER TAKES OVER

Some physicians and psychiatrists consider a third or more of serious child abusers to be psychotic. Other experts say the overwhelming number are suffering only from neuroses.

What society would call well-adjusted men and women reach a moment of rage too powerful to be bottled up and anger rules the mind for violence-filled minutes.

Mrs. Gertrude Bacon, executive director of Parents Anonymous in New York City, summed up the view of many experts:

"We are all potential abusers. There are many forms of abuse — physical, verbal, emotional and sexual. Can any parent honestly say he has never fit into any of these categories? We've all been there. The man serving 10 years for crippling his child—it could be any of us."

Parents Anonymous chapters help parents who cannot stop abusing their children. They operate much like Alcoholics Anonymous and one credo is to go "from one day to the next without striking my child." Members have included bankers, welfare mothers and people from all races and major religions. These parents realize they have crossed the line betwen discipline and abuse. Tens of thousands do not. Broken arms and fractured skulls are often passed off by parents, even to themselves, as "accidents" that occurred during "normal disciplining."

WORRIES CAUSE RAGE

Dr. Edwin Nichols, chief of the federal Centre for Studies for Child and Family Mental Health, says unwanted pregnancy, job insecurity, home break-up, a quick temper or emotional exhaustion can lead to destructive rages in parents.

The father of a "quite active" 18-month-old son, Dr. Nichols says his wife has adopted a tactic that heads off explosive situations in their home. When his wife feels heavy stress, she dons a red cap that has come to mean "absolutely no nonsense" to the boy.

"The hat says my wife has only one nerve left, that she intends to hang on to it and the baby is standing on it," Dr. Nichols said.

It is the rare parent who is not pushed near the line of serious abuse and many cross the line once or twice. But it is the habitual abuser who most threatens the lives and wellbeing of children.

A National Institute of Mental Health expert says as yet it is not possible to develop a profile of the likely abuser as has been done for likely aircraft hijackers. Indeed, many believe far too little is known of the problem, partly because society considers the situation so shameful that it would rather sweep the whole thing under the rug than spend money on research.

PLAYGROUND OUTING is enjoyed by U.S. Air Force Major Norman McDaniel at Greensboro, N.C. with his wife Jean, Randy, 10, and Crystal, 8. McDaniel was shot down over North Vietnam in July 1966 and was held prisoner until release this month.

CRIME HIKE LIB LINKED

NEW YORK (Reuter) — With or without the inspiration of Women's Liberation, women are becoming increasingly involved in crime.

Latest figures of the Federal Bureau of Investigation show that the number of women arrested for "serious" crimes such as murder and armed robbery increased 80 per cent from 1966 to 1971.

The increase for males during that period was 35 per cent.

Equality is still far away.

While the number of women arrested for all crimes in the U.S. in 1971 increased twice as much as that of men, the FBI figures show some 951,000 arrests of females compared with 5,370,000 male arrests.

But the women's crime rate is rising and some authorities see a direct link with women's lib.

"Women's liberation has given women freedom and release which has opened a lot of formerly male occupations, including crime," said Superintendent Essie Murphy of Rinker's Island women's jail in New York.

A spokesman for the Houston police department said women's lib's influence had made things acceptable which were totally taboo before.

Betty Friedan, one of the founders of the movement, agreed that the increase in female-committed crime may be a byproduct.

"As women become more assertive, and if they are barred economically and in other ways from dignity, and minimal comfort, they are likely to take aggressive and hostile actions," she said.

Marmalade Treat A Fine Traveller

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: We moved here over three years ago and started taking your paper. Never in any place we have lived before (my husband is a minister so periodic moves are our lot) have I come across such a good, practical and down-to-earth food column as yours. Your motto seems to be "something for everybody." Enclosed is a recipe for Marmalade Chews that keep and travel well. Keep up the good columns. Mrs. Dorothy S.

ANSWER: On a dull cold morning it was cheering to receive your letter Dorothy. I tried your Marmalade Chews and felt that readers with large families would welcome them. I changed the name because they are crisper than they are chewy.

MARMALADE CRISPS

NOTE: If you like very crisp cookies increase amount of marmalade to ½ cup.

½ c. shortening,
½ c. light brown sugar,
½ c. white sugar,
1 egg,
1 tsp. vanilla,
1 c. stirred but unsifted cake and pastry flour,
½ tsp. baking powder,
½ tsp. baking soda,
½ tsp. salt,
½ tsp. cinnamon,
¼ tsp. nutmeg,
1 c. rolled oats,
¼ c. orange marmalade,
½ c. (or more) raisins.

Measure into beater bowl the shortening, sugars, egg and vanilla and beat until creamy and light. Sift together the flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and spices and beat in. Add rolled oats, marmalade and raisins and on "low" speed mix in. Drop by mounded teaspoonfuls onto greased cookie sheets at least three inches apart for these spread. (I used four cookie sheets.) Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about eight to 10 minutes. Watch these carefully for with the sugars and marmalade they tend to brown quickly. I made 45.

They stayed crisp and kept well. Dorothy says they are good travellers.

Thank-you Dorothy.

JELLY SIDE DOWN

I'm not terribly fussy about a car's performance.

All I expect from our car is that when I step on the accelerator it pursue a generally forward direction, emitting whatever strange noises and vibrations it so chooses. Likewise, should my pleasure lie behind (and assuming that I can locate reverse) I expect the car to oblige by going backward.

And I have a theory that if we faithfully keep filling it with gasoline and seeing that its widgets are greased, the car is duty-bound to keep up its end of the bargain by running.

Not only are my automotive wants really quite simple, but I will endure all manner of minor aberrations. For years I owned a car whose inside door handles had fallen off. Whenever I arrived at my destination, I simply sat inside, knocking and gesturing, until someone came along to let me out.

Men are not only much more demanding, but their attitude toward a car is much different from that of a woman. I've heard that in a monogamous society, a man's automobile has become a substitute for a mistress.

The Iron Mistress

I'm not saying that I actually believe this, but whenever our neighbor begins massaging wax into the fender of his Ferrari, I call the children inside, draw the drapes, and read them something wholesome like Winnie-the-Pooh.

In my husband's case, an entire harem of cars has paraded through his life, each of which he has unfeelingly turfed out on one flimsy pretext or another.

He packs our present auto off to the repair shop every time it goes "pickety-boo," which he considers to be the mechanical equivalent of a sharp pain in the lower right portion of the abdomen.

"Listen!" he said last week. "There it goes again!"

"Not pickety-boo again!" I cried. "It pickety-booed $75 worth just last month."

"I think that she's about had it," he replied ruefully.

"She still runs," I protested.

"But she doesn't purr like she used to. Besides, yesterday I saw this gorgeous French job, sleek body and . . ."

"Come on, kids," I yelled. "Let's go read Winnie-the-Pooh."

dear abby

Why Try Harder?

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a divorced man for two years now. He has a child by his ex-wife, and my problem is that he keeps reminding me in no uncertain terms that his child will always come first!

I just can't accept this. I don't think any woman could. We have had several very serious arguments over this. He tells me he loves me, then he quickly reminds me that his child will always come first. (This child lives with his ex-wife, but he has generous visitation rights.)

After he's had a few drinks he talks about marriage, and I think he really means it, but when it comes to setting a date, he has so many reasons why he has to wait.

There's only one big problem, Abby. I really love this man in spite of everything. So what should I do?—Foolish

DEAR FOOLISH: Tell him your name isn't "Avis," and you don't intend to try harder because you're Number Two. I respect a divorced parent who considers his child, but the closest, most enduring relationship of all is the husband-wife relationship. Kiss the man goodbye before he beats you to it. He's trying to discourage you.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I'm crazy, but I have a problem I haven't been able to conquer for five years.

My husband will not kiss me! He kisses our kids, but not me. We kissed before we were married, but since then he won't kiss me at all.

I am not ugly and I use plenty of mouthwash so I don't have bad breath. I used to be a good kisser, but I am getting out of practice. I have cried, begged, and tried to reason with him but nothing helps. Believe it or not, we have a good marriage and a good sex life, but no kisses.

We are both 25 and I hate to think of the years ahead without a kiss. Can you help me? This is no put-on. I am dead serious. — Mrs. Kissless

DEAR KISSLESS: Ever heard of a fixation? Well, it appears that your husband has developed one about kissing. But don't despair. It can be fixed by a fixer-upper of fixations. So get your kissaphobic mate to a head doctor and head off a kissless future. (Marriages have been kissed off for less.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl and I've always wanted to play the drums. My big brother plays the drums and I figured that since he has a set, my folks wouldn't have to buy one for me. (He's away at college.)

Well, I asked my mother and she said no. Afterwards I found out that my mother talked it over with my brother and he said it wasn't very "feminine" for a girl to play the drums. I'm not one of those big Women's Lib girls. I just want to play the drums. What do you think? —Likes The Drums

DEAR LIKES: I think your brother ought to be ashamed of himself. If he's a musician worth a drumstick, he knows there is nothing unfemnine about playing the drums. He probably just doesn't want his kid sister messing with his drums while he's away.

Ever since the Klondike Gold Rush in 1898, Yukon hospitality has become famous across the country.

The illustrated 12-page Hospitality Yukon lists accommodations along various routes, including the Alaska Highway, and the location of major camp grounds.

Yukon Adventure, 16 pages and illustrated, suggests what to do and see in our romantic northland. Because of the Yukon's scenic beauty, amateur photographers are urged to bring along a generous supply of colour film, or you can buy it there.

The 12-page illustrated Hunt and Fish Yukon makes it clear that the thousands of mountain lakes and streams are a fisherman's paradise. Catch limits are extremely generous. There is no catch limit on white fish, burbot, inconnu and cisco.

Directions where to find specific fish species are also included. Similar information is given with regard to game animals.

These booklets also explain the Yukon's distinctive symbol, three mountain climbers. They commemorate the heroic effort of the Klondikers of 1898 who took an unbelievably difficult route to join the greatest Gold Rush of all times.

For any of these publications write to: Yukon Department of Travel and Information, Box 2703, Whitehorse, Yukon. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, March 21
By SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What begins in a mild way could end in a torrid manner. This includes special situations and relationships. Don't start anything unless you expect to finish it. Friends and money are not likely to mix. Keep the two areas separate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You could nail down beneficial agreement. Key is to make contact with one in authority. If you wait for others, including legal representative, you could wait a long time. Make known your desires and abilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may feel drawn in two directions. You will know which way to go once you attend to details. Build from bottom to top — don't bypass essentials. Older individual may be stuck with outmoded concepts. Be true to your own principles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Break free from entanglement which really should not be your concern. Sagittarian is involved. Young person expresses attitude that may be distasteful. Sense of humor helps. Avoid giving up something for nothing. Includes money.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What appears opposition may merely be intelligent restraint. Know it and respond accordingly. Aquarian figures prominently. Contract, agreement could be offered which represents chance for expansion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Barrier to communication is removed. Gemini person proves an ally. Give ideas a chance to develop and flourish. Don't hop from one project to another — concentrate efforts. Return of vitality is indicated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money and home are featured. Expenditures which help brighten domestic area should not be disputed. Make peace with family members. Diplomacy now is your solid ally. Know it and win rather than force your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can get back on solid ground. Cycle is such that you are able to uncover deceptions. Intuitive intellect is honed to razor-sharpness. Pisces plays significant role. You make profitable new start.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): What seemed like a lost cause turns out to be a winning proposition. Look behind the scener. Don't judge by what appears obvious. Someone seems determined to pull wool over your eyes. Thwart this by double checking.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friend helps you complete assignment. Profit is the result. You feel better because you are relieved of burden. Favor is returned. Added recognition is featured. More persons become aware of your abilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Opportunities multiply. Creative abilities are highlighted. Accent is on ambition, standing in community, reward for professional efforts. Leo is in picture. Get started on project which enhances prestige.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Look beyond the immediate — consider the potential. One who is a natural teacher expresses willingness to share knowledge. Be receptive. Leo and Aquarius are featured. Follow through on hunch. Your extrasensory perception is at work.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have fine sense of humor, have a tendency to gain weight easily, love to travel, are expressive and draw to you many persons born under Sagittarius. September should be your most significant month of 1973.

Life in a Bottle

Alcoholic Left Out By Society That Pours Drink

By PAT MURPHY
First of a Series

Six-Step Toward Illness:

Alcoholism rarely strikes with warning. Experts consider the "promodal" or early stage of the disease a time of warning before the actual onset. It is a time when a person continues to function, at least outwardly, as they always do but displaying increasing psychological signs of dependence on alcohol, such as:

1) He or she tends to drink on signal: before starting the day's work, with lunch, after dinner, at bedtime, when they're bored, elated, tired, upset.

2) One who always drinks more than companions, often more than intended and certainly more than they are used to.

3) Can't have a good time without drinking; it's a "must" for every social occasion.

4) They don't sip drinks; they gulp them.

5) Drinking on the sly and alone.

6) Blackouts; apparently drinking in a normal manner, perhaps not more than a few drinks although usually much more. Afterwards there is no recollection of episodes which followed drinking or even that they took place.

From This is AA, a publication of Alcoholism Anonymous:

"We do not think we are the only people who have the answer to problem drinking. We know that the AA program works for us and we have seen it work for every newcomer, almost without exception."

The unkempt vagrant lurches along the waterfront cadging quarters to buy a bottle of "goof." This man represents only three to five per cent of the alcoholic brotherhood, but he is the polarization point for much of the scorn the public pours on alcoholics.

There is also the well-groomed Uplands resident, knocking back a couple of Bloody Marys for breakfast, driving with due care and attention down to the liquor store, stocking up and holing up at home for the day with his or her booze.

Or the ordinary job-holder, having drunk what he thought would be an ample supply for a wet weekend, nipping next door for a couple of beers to kill that lousy head on another Blue Monday.

No Barrier

Also the housewife, rich or poor, sleek or slattern, who pulls away all day on a bottle of gin to drown her boredom and frustration. She's stoned by the time the kids get home from school.

Alcoholism is a progressive disease and incurable. It erodes physically, emotionally, spiritually and socially. Although it often follows a classic pattern it can strike at almost any time in a drinker's life.

It is an oversimplification but, for the purposes of brevity it can be stated that the drinker must meet two conditions to be an alcoholic. There must be compulsion to drink to cope with almost any given situation and an inability to stop after the first drinks are taken.

Just where the social drinkers, social and alcoholic, divide is hard to pinpoint. All drinkers, social and alcoholic, behave similarly in their early use of drinking alcohol. Most alcoholics, while they drink more, develop a tolerance for the drug which enables them to hide the outward manifestations of the developing disease.

Why some drinkers are more sensitive to alcohol and so develop alcoholism, is not fully understood.

Theories there are by the score, everything from chemical imbalance and allergy on the physical side to moral bankruptcy and downright depravity.

One in 15

It is known that about one in 15 drinkers will become an alcoholic and that the illness can be controlled. Control is possible only with total abstinence.

Mercedes McCambridge, admitted alcoholic and internationally famous actress, who is a missionary for public understanding of the problem, refuses to believe that alcoholics are different from other people — except perhaps, more intelligent.

Asked if "a perfectly normal, well-adjusted person" could become an alcoholic, she replied: "I'm afraid I don't know any such people. Do you?"

Rate Rises

Alcoholism is one of the great killers—in the same league with cancer and heart disease but unlike those two it is not respectable. It stems from the greatest and by far the most prevalent of all drug addictions ever.

The epithets drunk, lush, soak, sot, souse and many others are all used to indicate our contempt and, possibly, our fear. In no other illness is the "It can't happen to me" fallacy so widely accepted.

The failure in Canada — particularly in B.C. — to confront the problem is one reason, that it has become so widespread and is growing at a rate estimated very conservatively at five per cent a year. If it is not identified what can stop it?

Most doctors although not by any means all, concede that alcoholism is a medical concern and not a few will frankly admit that they have had little or no training in the treatment of the disease.

Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace told an alcoholism seminar in Victoria late in February that what he knew about the disease he had learned through experience in his practice and not at school. He also dealt with the physician's frustration in dealing with a disease physical, emotional, spiritual and social in its ramifications.

"A broken leg I can deal with . . ." Wallace said.

The question of a doctor's responsibility is a matter for philosophical debate. But many alcoholics and workers in the field are disenchanted by the attitude of the profession to the problem.

In the August October, 1971 issue of Alcoholism Review published by the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., M. McCormick states:

Resentment

"Most general practitioners have come to accept the idea of the alcoholic as a sick man. But resentment of him still lingers and many who would be incapable of turning away any other kind of suffering human being, are unable to accept him as a patient."

Says Dr. Norman McCreath, medical director of Grace Hospital, Assiniboia, Manitoba:

"Concerned doctors do, from time to time, try to obtain beds for these people (alcoholics). Their batting average is regrettably poor."

Electric Heart May See Use This Year

MINNETONKA, Minn. (UPI) — An artificial electric heart with no heart beat, already successfully implanted in a St. Bernard dog, may be put in a human late this year.

The two-pound device, which would do away with the heartbeat under a unique, smooth blood flow principle, could replace all or part of the human heart, according to Dr. Harold Kletschka, 48.

It also may "outperform the heart," said Kletschka, a former open heart surgeon who has been working on the invention for 20 years.

Kletschka and his associates, Edson Rafferty, 29, a biomedical engineer, and Dr. Douglas Olsen, 42, a blood specialist, are so confident their "heart" will work that they have made plans for construction of a series of heart hospitals across the country where it could be implanted.

Last year, they implanted the mechanism in a 105-pound St. Bernard dog for seven days, and the dog showed no signs of abnormality while its heart was assisted in its pumping function.

The experiment was terminated, the researchers said, because any signs of blood damage would have appeared within the first few days and there was no need to continue the test. The dog now is Rafferty's house pet, again vitalized by its own heart.

For their success, the researchers were presented the "I-R 100" award, given for 100 inventions each year by Industrial Research magazine.

Rafferty said the researchers may experiment on a human, at least with a heart-assist device, sometime in late 1973.

Only one model of the patented, cylindrical device exists. It is about three inches in diameter, encased in silicone and shiny stainless steel with a tube protruding for grafting to the aorta (a main artery supplying blood to the limbs and organs).

An off-the-shelf 30-watt motor is housed inside, attached to centrifugal rotators which accelerate the blood through a central chamber and into circulation.

The principle is modeled after the orange juice or fruit juice spray dispensers in dime stores, which spin the liquids off a plastic-topped container as a lure to prospective buyers.

Rafferty said, "We believe that man shouldn't try to duplicate nature. He should improve on nature. A non-pulsatile pump doesn't damage the blood, and it pumps blood efficiently enough to use presently available energy sources."

The motor, which Rafferty said the dog didn't notice, would be powered by a three-pound battery pack which could be implanted in the abdomen.

"Patients would recharge their batteries through the skin by magnetic induction about once a week to once every two weeks," Rafferty said. In the future, more compact, atomic-powered batteries are expected to be developed and could last several years, he said.

More implantations in dogs are planned, to test both the blood pump and the "heart" before they are tried on humans.

"I hope by the time we get ready for a human, we won't need a 'guinea pig,'" Rafferty said. "We've already been approached. Doctors will call us and say, 'Can we use your heart? We've got a patient on the table who isn't going to make it.'"

Rafferty said the heart will cost between $2,000 and $3,000, plus any surgical expenses. He predicted half a million people could benefit from the heart each year.

Homemakers Service Started in Victoria

A privately-run service providing homemakers, nurses' aides and companions is starting business in Victoria.

Medox Homemakers Service, an offshoot of Office Overload, started interviewing job applicants last week and expects to go into business in the next week.

Helen Donald, who will be unit manager of the service, said she got 200 calls in one day from job applicants, and "we're going to be hiring a lot of them."

The Medox service is strictly a profit-making venture, and Donald said it was aimed chiefly at middle-income elderly Victorians.

"Being an elderly or geriatric community, there's a particular need for it," she said. Cost will be $2.50 an hour.

The homemakers will be paid $1.65 an hour, considerably less than the minimum wage, but Donald pointed out that being domestics, homemakers aren't covered by the minimum wage law.

A homemaker service is presently being operated here by the Canadian Red Cross. However, Dr. Olga Jardine, director of the B.C. and Yukon division of the Red Cross, refused to give any information about the service that might be used to compare it with the private service.

"We're certainly not doing any competition," she said.

Donald said she's not concerned about the announcement by Health Minister Dennis Cocke that the government will spend $2.5 million this year to develop a special corps of homemakers throughout the province.

She's hoping the government might incorporate Medox into its plan by paying the cost of service instead of the patient paying.

"If they were smart that's what they would do," she said.

Bay Restaurant Not Dancehall

It was erroneously reported in Saturday's Times that McMorran's Marine Drive Restaurant at 5110 Cordova Bay Road is connected with McMorran's Cordova Bay Ltd.'s dancing and ballroom facilities at 5109 Cordova Bay Road.

The restaurant is owned by Stephan Eror who provides dining and catering services not dance facilities.

Computer Reports Remain

Computerized report cards will be continued at Mount View, Reynolds and Highrock secondary schools and they'll be started at S. J. Willis in 1973.

The decision was made Monday by the Greater Victoria School Board because trustees felt the system was a benefit that allows teachers more time to help students.

The decision came despite the results of a survey that showed 57 per cent of students were opposed to the computer cards, although 94 per cent of the teachers favored them.

MINORITY

Trustee Daphne Temple said she feels the students who expressed strong opposition to the board at an earlier meeting, 'were only representing a small minority."

Trustee Hal Knight agreed: "I've been conducting my own little poll of 10 students and I got the impression they didn't care one way or the other."

The computerized cards print out attendance, statistics, grades and a list of comments which teachers can choose from.

Trustee Lavinia Greenwood said she hoped supplementary remarks would be added by teachers and Trustee William Ross suggested that parent-teacher interviews could assist in communication about students.

BASKERVILLE is the name of Princess Anne's new pet foxhound, who she took to the Amberley Horse Show, but a spokesman for the royal family has jokingly called the dog a "presshound" for keeping cameramen at bay.

Saanich Ups Library Support

A 20 per cent heft in both the Saanich share and the total Greater Victoria Library budget for 1973 was approved Monday by Saanich council.

Aldermen noted Saanich has overtaken Victoria as the largest contributor to the library budet and this year, if the other municipalities approve the estimates, will provide $412,621, up 20 per cent from $343,130 in 1972.

The budget total is $1.13 million, up from $938,367 last year, with increases reflected in books, staff requirement and new facilities.

Librarian Donald Miller, who appeared with members of the library board, said total staff is still below the number employed before the Woods Gordon efficiency study in 1969.

Ald. Alan Newberry, council's delegate on the library board, called the library one of the community's institutions which has remained efficient. He also said the amount of budget increase attributable to Saanich would not be as much without the proposed addition of a fourth library branch in Gordon Head.

That branch is expected op open rented premises in the Shelbourne-McKenzie area at a cost of about $55,253, not counting furnishing, fixtures and renovations to which the provincial government would be expected to contribute.

There are 10,000 books waiting to be placed in circulation from that branch this year, Miller said.

Former board chairman Brian Tobin told the council a 15 per cent increase in the book budget includes 7 per cent increase in prices for new books, by which the library was trying to make up for past book-buying deficiency.

He said the library had managed to raise its standing from below average to average among Canadian libraries in terms of circulation, books and staff.

Miller said a new position would be community relations officer to co-ordinate community programs—"a kind of public relations position; nothing elaborate but difficult to do without a person to do it."

Tobin said the new branch would take pressure off the Saanich Centennial branch opened last fall.

In another library matter, council approved the designation of the municipal administrator and other senior planning staff to assist with a 1973 feasibility study aiming at a new main library-community resource centre.

An architect, library consultant, Victoria library staff and outside advisers will comprise the study team to look into the future of the building at Yates and Blanshard.

Oak Bay council also approved its share of the library budget Monday night.

It ruled that its finance committee would recommend which member of the municipal staff would represent Oak Bay on the feasibility study committee for the main library-community resource centre.

Acting mayor, Ald. Douglas Watts said:

"I have no objection to some planning but some years should elapse between the establishment of the branches and a new central library." He said a "little breather" should be taken "so we don't get financial indigestion."

Miller said he thought it would be at least five years before a new main library would become a reality.

Saanich Turns Down Plan For Highways Office

Saanich council Monday rejected a highways department application to rezone land at Royal Oak for its new regional field office building.

Council members were dissatisfied with a report from the chief medical officer to the effect that "satisfactory" sewage disposal would be installed. There is no trunk sewer service to the area and there was doubt about soil percolation capacity.

Ald. Edith Gunning said the health report was insufficient, recalling that at one time the applicant had offered to have the sewage hauled away, "a really archaic situation."

A triangular site is owned by the highways department at Royal Oak and Normandy, which would have to be rezoned from rural residential to civic institutional to permit the building of new offices in a single-storey building as proposed.

Ald. William Campbell moved the application be rejected until the area is provided with trunk sewers.

Two applications were referred to public hearing: from Vancouver Island Netherlands Association to rezone residential land at 733 Vanalman to assembly hall zoning; and from two applicants to have parcels of land at Gonge, Albina and Tillicum rezoned to permit tourist-commercial and supermarket use.

Architect R. D. Goldsworthy appeared for Fairway Holdings Ltd. and A. W. Pass, of Pass Construction Ltd., as the other principal, sought the rezoning of 19 lots including those on which Fairway Market now stands.

They proposed separate buildings on the adjoining properties for an integrated neighborhood shopping centre. Mayor Hugh Curtis said he would have expected all the principals to appear in connection with such a major undertaking.

He disagreed that the two structures were compatible as described and doubted there was adequate agreement on access.

SHOW TURNED DOWN

Jerry Gosley's Summer Smile Show got a cool reception from Esquimalt council Monday night.

Aldermen defeated a recommendation by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Ctmmittee that Esquimalt and the three other core municipalities make a $1,000 grant to the show.

"This is one I'm not too happy with," said Ald. Jim McEvay. "I don't see why they shouldn't have to make a profit like everybody else."

"I couldn't agree more," said Mayor Art Young.

Ald. Art Mebs defended the grant, which would be made because the show is now registered as a non-profit society.

"This type of show is synonymous with Victoria," said Mebs.

He pointed out that Gosley's show has made little profit in recent years, and that many local young people have received valuable training working in it.

Mother, Baby Unit Formed

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton's University Hospital has set up a special mother-baby unit which, doctors say, will lower the infant mortality rate in Alberta.

It is called a perinatal or high-risk unit, and uses equipment and skilled people from the hospital's departments of pediatrics and obstetrics.

Esquimalt Boosts Business Fees

A bylaw raising business licence fees in Esquimalt for the first time in nine years received final reading by Esquimalt council Monday.

The increases had been opposed by the Esquimalt Chamber of Commerce, which pointed out that in some cases fees would jump 433 per cent.

Two minor amendments were made to the bylaw before final reading, altering the new fee schedule for retail or mail order businesses, and establishing three categories of banks with separate licence fees.

Two zoning bylaws received third reading by council Monday and will go to a public hearing at 7 p.m. April 9.

For one, an application to rezone a parcel of land between 927 and 941 Esquimalt Rd., it will be the second public hearing.

The original bylaw, to rezone all seven lots in that block from commercial to multiple dwelling, was defeated by council last month by a narrow vote.

Two merchants in the block, Blake Sprague and Ralph Wherry, had objected to the rezoning of their two lots as they intended to continue operating their businesses.

The new bylaw omits Sprague and Wherry's lots and rezones only the other five.

Ald. Terry Prentice moved an amendment to the bylaw including the two lots in the zoning change, but could get no seconder. Prentice called the bylaw a test of council's principles and determination to keep commercial development along Esquimalt Rd. in solid blocks, not in one or two lots strung out along the road.

The second bylaw will zone the Gorge Vale Golf Club as "golf club zone" for the first time.

Municipal clerk George Merz reported to council that a petition with about 60 names had been received, supporting proposed construction of two tennis courts in Kinsmen Gorge Park.

The Esquimalt Citizens' Parks Committee presented a brief at council's last meeting opposing the use of parkland to create tennis courts.

Man, 21, Armed Himself To Walk to Heroin Cache

A man who armed himself with a loaded .22 rifle to walk to a heroin cache in his own backyard was convicted of trafficking by Judge M. L. Drake in county court Monday.

Kenneth Raymond Robinson, 21, was remanded in custody to April 9 for sentence.

RCMP undercover agent Blaine Froats testified that he and a "contact" went to Robinson's former home, at 211 Helmcken, on July 24.

As the two entered the house, eight people came out, he said.

After a brief conversation between Froats' contact and the accused, Robinson told Froats he had only two caps left in the house. He wanted $20 each for them.

PRICE TOO HIGH

"Downtown I could buy from a person by the name of Jerry for $15 . . . his price was too high," said Froats.

Froats quoted the accused as saying, "I do not like to cut prices as my partner, Jimmy, doesn't like to cut prices."

They finally agreed on $35 for the two caps and Froats put them in his boot.

Froats' contact then told Robinson she wanted half a cap.

Robinson said he had no more in the house but he'd go outside to his cache for more, said Froats.

Robinson then went down a hallway and returned wearing outdoor clothing and carrying a .22 calibre rifle, Froats testified.

FIRED INTO BUSHES

He told Froats to bolt the door and not to open it without first looking out the window. Robinson returned about five minutes later, fired a shot into the bushes and went back inside.

He went to the hallway and returned with a condom containing several caps of heroin, said Frouts.

Robinson removed one cap, broke it in half, and gave half to Froats' contact who paid the accused $10.

Robinson told some people in the kitchen to let Froats and his contact out and the door was bolted behind them, Floats testified.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel Ted Pollard, Froats said he'd never been to 211 Helmcken before.

HOUSE ROBBED

Pollard asked if he was aware the house had been robbed a number of times and Froats replied, "No, I was not. I believe it was robbed after I went, about a month after."

In summation, Prosecutor Cecil Branson said, "there is the evidence of the intense security of the place which is relevant . . . There was some bargaining, some bickering over price," and Robinson's trip to the backyard was "not the subject of the charge" but it indicates he was dealing.

Pollard said, "throughout the entire conversation there is no mention made of the drug diacetyl morphine or heroin."

Froats' contact referred to the drug as junk but "there's no evidence that junk is heroin. This is something that is widely known, a common term," said Pollard, but there was nothing in the evidence to prove that "junk" is a slang term for heroin.

"There's no doubt . . . the accused has trafficked in heroin," said Judge Drake.

GARDENING

A Child's Interest Should be Cultivated

If you are disinclined to get started on preparing for a vegetable garden, perhaps you can get your youngsters more enthusiastic. It might work, if you lay out a few ideas and invite some from them.

Depending on the ages of the children and on whether you have encouraged them to be with you during your garden working hours their knowledge of a plant's needs will grow.

If you help by keeping every bit of waste material for making good growing soil, you will be well on the way to success. This means more fresh vegetables in your meals and an easing on the strained household budget.

Come to think of it, that in itself could be leverage to prod the offspring — if they help to grow fruit and vegetables you will build them (1) a patio shelter (2) a picnic table.

Small fruits like raspberries and loganberries give a permanence to the garden. Once planted and a few training wires set up on stout posts, only pruning out of old canes and a twice yearly mulching with compost is needed. The fully ripened fruits make delicious desserts such as cannot be bought in any store — need less sugar too, another saving in several ways.

Let the new gardeners choose some exotic vegetable like okra with beautiful purple flowers and mucilagenous pods, or the shiny black eggplants. But from your superior knowledge, be sure to let them know they must start the seeds indoors at least eight weeks before the plants can go into the garden at the end of May.

Promise to build a coldframe in a sunny warm garden spot where these plants will grow in good soil all summer or at least be kept in pots waiting for warm weather.

Squash with queer shapes like Crookneck, Patty-pan, or Buttercup will appeal to some youngsters and make lovely eating. Lovely purple cabbages will appeal to others; while you may have a real pioneer wanting to grow watermelons or peanus.

Before you know it, you'll be hunting through seed lists with the young ones, discovering that it is quite possible to produce a small watermelon or two on a plant in this area if you start with the seed of a small variety. The coldframe you promised will be utilized for the young plants in separate pots after they are raised from indoor sown seed. Sow about mid-April.

You find also that the stems of peanuts bend over until they bury the tips in the soil and there form the edible nuts.

Golden tomatoes, purple beans, edible podded peas, corn with colored kernels, and the graceful herbs are other possibilities as choices of interest and usefulness.

Don't forget to encourage the growing of a few cut flowers in the vegetable garden. There are junior classes in most flower shows all through summer and fall. Your own junior achievement dabbler may turn out to be a winner.

Before you know it, your own enthusiasm will have reached a peak where you get started on your part of the deal. With your example and a bit of prodding, the others will get started too.

Plan your weekends so you'll be home, working outside. You go back to the job on Monday refreshed with the prospect of all the good food to come from the garden, and the fact that the family budget will be eased in a surprising number of ways.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In tournaments in this day and age, many types of prearangerd, esoteric leads are made, which would give the defenders a tremendous advantage if the declarer were ignorant of the precise meaning of the lead.

So, according to the rules, a declarer is always permitted to ask the partner of the leader if the latter's lead has any cryptic connotation known only to the leader and his partner.

In today's deal, which arose in the 1972 National Championships, a defender gave an honeset answer when queried as to the interpretation of partner's opening lead. His honesty turned out to be the best policy for his side, for it prevented South from making an overtrick which he would have made if he had had to guess the significance of the lead.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◊	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass
6 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♡.

The bidding:

After West had opened the heart four, our South declarer turned to East and inquired: "Is there anything unusual about your partner's lead?" East answered: "It guarantees a picture card in hearts."

Dummy's jack of hearts was put up, East covered with the queen, and South won the trick with his ace. Having secured the "guarantee" that West was the possessor of the heart king, a heart was returned by South at trick two. When West now took his king, dummy's ten became declarer's slam-going trick.

Had East not given an honest answer, declarer would not have known the heart set-up. That is, East might well have had the K-Q-9 in which case a heart lead from the South hand at trick two would have resulted in the loss of two heart tricks, and declarer's immediate demise.

Without the benefit of East's explanation, South would have attacked the diamond suit, in the hope that the six adversely-held diamonds were divided 3-3. And, with the favorable diamond distribution materializing, five diamond tricks would have been made, for a total of 13 tricks.

At most of the tables, when the deal was replayed, a club was led against South's six-notrump contract. In each case, 13 tricks were made by bringing home five diamond winners.

9 IN MEMORIAM

EDDIE — In ever loving memory of a dear son and brother, Colin John Perrin Eddie, who passed away March 20, 1963.
Sweet the memories silently kept
Of one we loved and will never forget.
No length of time can take away
Our thoughts of you from day to day,
Your smiling face and wonderful ways
Are a pleasure to recall;
You had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
—Ever remembered by your mother, Jim and Elsie.

LEE — In loving memory of dear Barbara, who passed away March 20, 1972.
Yours was a heart so happy and gay,
You scattered sunshine along life's way.
Beautiful memories we will never forget,
We loved you then and we love you yet.

SECRETARY-MANAGER
For the British Columbia Oyster Industry.
The successful applicant will be responsible for the management of an oyster producers co-operative at Quathiaski Cove, British Columbia. Objectives of the position will be:
—to co-ordinate the collection of oysters from various producers and arrange for their orderly processing and marketing.
—to excercise strict quality control on products.
—to develop new processing methods and products.
—to promote oyster products
Applicants must have proven marketing and managerial abilities, preferably in fishery products.
The position is for a two-year term. Salary to be negotiated according to qualifications, from $12,000 per annum.

Commercial Fisheries Branch
Parliament Buildings
Victoria, B.C.

W—A—N—T—E—D
Mature, ex-businessman or salesman to introduce Harley Davidson Golf Cars (American Sales Leaders) to clubs and pros. This is not a daily grind but would require certain days or weeks in a year concentrated and working with golf courses in Victoria and Vancouver. (We do represent B.C. though.)
The challenge should be interesting and worthwhile, the earnings would depend on accomplishment and probably not be immediate.
Nominal expenses would be provided, but the real remuneration would have to come from the sales and leases developed. We're looking for the man that wants an interest in life and has the initiative to build and look after a business without constant supervision.
Kindly arrange for interview, Don Telford, 386-8424, including Sunday.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Cluster Headache Relief Difficult

Sometimes people write to ask me about a cluster headache. This type of headache is sometimes called a Horton headache, because Dr. Bayard Horton of the Mayo Clinic spent years studying the curious problem.

Dr. Horton tried to help sufferers by giving them injections of histamine, a chemical formed in the body and associated with certain allergic reactions that some people have. Dr. Horton hoped in this way to make persons less sensitive to the histamine.

This type of headache is different from migraine, because it tends to come in "clusters"—there are periods of several weeks when every morning, around four o'clock, the patient wakes with a headache so severe that he has to jump out of bed and walk up and down the room in great distress. Sometimes the headache may last for three hours, and there is sometimes watering and congestion of the eye on the side of the head where the pain comes, and also some stuffiness of the nose on that side.

After two or three weeks, the headaches may stop coming, and may not return for months or even a year or more. Some physicians try to treat it with drugs that help sufferers from migraine but usually the treatment is difficult, and it is hard to give relief.

Abortions Easier to Get

LONDON (Reuter) — The worldwide trend to wider legalization of abortion cuts across divisions of ideology and economic development.

Traditionally, women in the vast majority of countries were forbidden by law to have abortions unless there were extraordinary reasons, such as a clear threat to their lives or health.

The tide of change has risen to a point where the four most populous countries—China, India, the Soviet Union and the United States—now recognize fairly wide grounds for abortion, although with varying limits. And the trend still seems to be growing in a number of other countries.

But government and health authorities clearly do not regard liberalization of abortion as a solution in itself.

In China, with the biggest population in the world, contraception is much more favored than abortion. Contraceptive pills or injections are available from hospitals and from the health workers known as "barefoot doctors" in rural areas.

Chinese health authorities refuse abortion after the 12th week of pregnancy unless the mother's life is endangered.

GIVEN ON DEMAND

In India, the next most populous country, a liberalized abortion law came into force last April after almost eight years of debate. While some of its causes are ambiguous, it is widely seen as virtually providing for abortion on demand.

More than 15,000 women have had legal abortions since the law took effect—a tiny figure compared with the government estimate of about four million abortions performed in the country each year, the vast majority illegally.

In Japan, under a "eugenic protection law" adopted in 1948, abortions rose to a peak of about 1.2 million officially reported in 1955, then gradually diminished to a reported total of about 740,000 in 1971.

In Russia, the first major easing of abortion rules came in 1920, three years after the revolution. In 1936 the Russians drastically tightened the rules again, limiting abortion to cases justified by health problems.

But in 1955 they went back to a more liberal approach, under which any woman who demands abortion is entitled to it unless there are medical reasons against it.

OPERATIONS FREE

In much of Eastern Europe it is relatively easy for women to have abortions, often free of charge, although there are certain legal restrictions.

In the West, the movement toward freer abortion has steadily gained momentum. The U.S. Supreme Court decision liberalizing abortion this year went further in leaving the decision to individual conscience than most Western countries have, but there had already been a long and gradual movement towards broadening the grounds for abortion in other countries.

In Canada, the criminal code now allows abortions to protect the life or health of a woman if the abortion is approved by a committee and if the operation is performed in an accredited hospital.

Tiny Iceland set an example in 1935 by including grounds now seen as "medico-social," including financial and domestic considerations.

Sweden, Denmark and Finland later widened their laws to consider the conditions of a woman's life in evaluating the dangers to her health of having a child.

LAW STILL DEBATED

Arguments are still raging in Britain over a liberalization of abortion law in 1967, allowing consideration of the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman or her family, and permitting her environment to be taken into account.

Typically for countries which liberalize their laws, the number of legal abortions in Britain rose to 90,000 from 7,000 a year although there are no figures for the "back-street" abortions which were widespread before. Also typically, the number of reported deaths from abortion has been cut by half to about 30 a year.

Even in Italy, where laws on moral issues normally show the effects of Vatican influence, a bill to legalize abortion has been introduced by a Socialist member of parliament.

Laws in Latin America generally ban or limit abortions stringently to cases of medical need, and sometimes rape or other special circumstances.

LAB UNCOVERS FAKE POTTERY

OXFORD, England (AP) — Are you proud of your 8th century priceless Chinese T'ang dynasty vase?

If so, take another look — it could be a 20th century fake.

The Oxford University Research Laboratory for Archeology and the History of Art have published a report which said many fakes of ancient Chinese pottery are still in circulation at prices up to $125,000 a piece.

Of four items from this period belonging to the Freer Gallery of Art at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, too are fakes, the report said.

Dr. Stuart Fleming, of the Oxford Research Laboratory, said he had so far tested 37 pieces attributed to the T'ang dynasty — 618-907 A.D.— and found eight of them were 20th century imitations.

Major London art dealers all submit such pottery to the laboratory for examination before auctioning them off.

The process employed by the laboratory to test the authenticity of ancient pottery is called thermoluminescence testing.

Clay and feldspar contained in the clay used by potteries acquire a kind of glow, called thermoluminescent glow, from rays passing through the earth's atmosphere.

When the piece of pottery, vase, bowl or statuette is baked at temperatures above 400 degrees Centigrade, this glow vanishes.

But radiation continues from the date of manufacture and the particles in the tested item again begin to acquire this glow.

By measuring its intensity, the research laboratory is able to determine its age. The older the piece of pottery, the greater its luminescence.

The laboratory concludes that all the fakes seem to have been produced since 1910 when many early tombs were unearthed by railroad building in China.

Go-Go Dancer In Pen

OTTAWA (CP) — "Normally this is not the type of entertainment we offer inmates."

So said a spokesman of the penitentiaries service as he attempted to explain how a go-go dancer got on stage clad in a bikini and a couple of pasties.

The dancer was part of a benefit show at St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary March 12.

Noting the event, a Social Credit MP asked in the Commons last week whether this type of entertainment was going to be part of the rehabilitation attempts at other penitentiaries. He got no reply from Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

The service spokesman said Monday that the dancer was part of a variety show staged by some Montreal entertainers. He said prison authorities were not aware that the girl was part of the act until just before the curtain went up.

By then word got to the prisoners that something special was forthcoming.

Prison authorities decided that discretion was the better part of valor and that she should go on. After all prisoners tend to "jump through the ceiling" when angered, the spokesman said.

What's wrong with a pastie-bikini clad dancer appearing before prisoners?

"These guys don't happen to see girls like this—some might get over excited," the penitentiaries spokesman said.

If you're in the market for a car loan, get it from the Royal Bank...

and we'll pay $25.00 toward your plates!

It's very simple. We have $25.00 in crisp new bills to put in your hand the moment we put through a Termplan Personal Loan for you, for $1,000 or more of new money before June 29th.

No catches, no strings. No change in our interest rate. Plus: life insurance at no extra cost. You don't even have to be a Royal Bank customer.

It's a good offer—so good that you may wonder what's in it for us.

Well, personal lending is a very important part of our business. We know that there are many people in the market for money this spring, and we want to increase our share of the business. So, we're offering you the best incentive we know of—the thing we know best—money. We haven't changed our interest rates, and there are no hidden charges. We hope to make the money back from the increase in volume. And you, the borrower, can reap the benefit now, with the assurance that the Royal Bank will never knowingly let you get in over your head.

It doesn't matter whether you bank with us or not, and the only account you'll need to open is a chequing account for the loan repayments. This offer applies to anybody who can qualify for a loan. Just talk to your local Royal Bank manager before June 29.

Remember—you'll be in a better position to make the best deal if you know you've got the money. So arrange your loan before you shop for the car.

Or if you need a $1000 loan for something else, we'll still give you $25...in cash.

CANADIAN 'KNEE' POSSIBLE

CALGARY (CP) — A situation similar to the one at Wounded Knee, S.D., could occur in Alberta unless Indians here begin acting now to prevent it, Mervin Wolfleg, information officer with the Alberta Indian Education Centre, said.

"We've been oppressed for a long time, but that is not a reason to lose our intellect," he told an Indian youth conference.

Young people with schooling can use education to right wrongs instead of "grabbing a gun and shooting a white guy."

A major objective of the American Indian movement, which is behind the armed occupation of Wounded Knee, is to promote leaders among the youth as well as older people, Wolfleg said. The same objective should be sought by Canadian Indians.

Bobby Breaker, a student in the Indian Students University Program where entrance requirements are modified to permit mature Indians into university, told the group free education for Indians is not welfare.

"We have paid in advance for our education by surrendering our lands."

He said many Indians fail to complete Grade 12 because of the one-sided education system. They were casualties rather than failures.

Curriculums in integrated schools "are programmed to make Indian children believe they are inferior and incapable of handling their own affairs."

While Indian culture emphasizes tradition and group association, the white education system gives individualism top priority, Breaker said.

Indian students are taught to think and act white, he said. They learned of "brave pioneers and noble Mounties" while the role of the Indian was degraded.

"Our major tool to survive in white society is education."

Manitoba Civil Servants Ask for Four-Day Week

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba civil servants Monday asked the provincial government for reductions in the work week and a pay increase of 12½ per cent for 1973-74.

Presenting contract proposals, the Manitoba Government Employees Association asked for a four-day, 32-hour week for 8,500 civil servants and a five-day, 40-hour week for about 2,500 departmental employees" in the department of highways, mines and tourism and recreation.

The association asked the government for a one-year contract instead of the normal two-year agreement.

Roll Bars Urged for Tractors

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Medical Association says roll bars or safety cabs should be mandatory on all farm tractors.

The association sent a letter to Agriculture Minister Sam Uskiw pointing out that in Europe, there was a reduction in deaths and injuries following introduction of such mandatory legislation.

Air Quality Index Questioned

EDMONTON (CP) — A university report on air pollution in the city charges there is no connection between the "air quality index put out by the environment department and either visible pollution or public health effects."

The index, based on information collected on the third floor of the Alberta government's administration building, should be checked, the report says.

Jasper Rail Workers Lose Work

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Seventy CNR employees at this mountain division point have been without work for three weeks, victims of the work-to-rule procedures of Vancouver switchmen, railway officials reported today.

The CNR employeees, all engineers and trainmen, have been laid off because the Vancouver labor dispute has cut the number of freight trains from the prairies headed for British Columbia.

Jasper has a railway work force of about 400.

Agriculture at Crossroads

BIGGAR, Sask. (CP) — If the population in rural areas continues to decline, the cost of providing and maintaining services for the few remaining people left in agriculture will become prohibitive, Agriculture Minister Jack Messer said Monday.

Messer, speaking to the annual Rural-Urban Day, said agriculture was at a crossroads and government must choose the direction to follow.

Crop Insurance Increased

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba farmers are purchasing more crop insurance than usual this year.

Spokesmen for the Manitoba Crop Insurance Corporation say 272 new contracts had been signed by March 13 compared with 81 on the same date last year.

Looser OAP Limits Suggested

OTTAWA (CP) — The income limits for recipients of the old age pension may be loosened, Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde indicated Monday.

Under the present limits, a pensioner has his pension reduced by 50 cents a year for each dollar of outside income between $960 and $1,600 a year and by $1 for each dollar above $1,600.

The Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, in their annual submission to the cabinet, asked Tuesday that the income limit be removed completely.

The federation says several elderly persons had been forced by the limit to quit their jobs as school-crossing guards.

Lalonde said he doubts that the provinces would agree to removing the limit.

Grits 'Diddling' on Homes

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition members pleaded Monday in the Commons for a massive government effort to solve housing shortages as debate continued on Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford's latest housing bill.

Sinclair Stevens (PC-York-Simcoe), striking the tone echoed by most opposition spokesmen, said the legislation has some positive aspects but does "little more than diddle" with the housing crisis confronting the country.

He attacked the government hardest for allowing land prices, particularly in large urban centres, to spiral out of control and make home ownership impossible for many citizens.

Ian Watson, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Basford, agreed that the cost of serviced land has become a crucial proble. He attributed soaring costs to "pure speculative profit" but said the bill takes steps to help reverse the trend.

The legislation, awaiting second reading, is designed to make home ownership easier for low-income families, restore urban neighborhoods and promote community planning and housing research.

CANADIAN CITIES HIGH

The New Democratic Party has pledged to support the bill, assuring the minority Liberal government of its passage.

Mr. Stevens said it now costs more to buy a home in Toronto, Ottawa or Hamilton than in any other city in North America.

Quoting 1971 figures, he said it cost an average of $37,537 to buy a home in Toronto, $30,958 in Ottawa and $28,429 in Hamilton. Financed with a 25-year mortgage at a nine-per-cent interest this would mean a final bill of $81,000.

Mr. Stevens said Canada's population will increase by 13 million by the year 2000 and it will cost an average of $2 billion yearly from now on to provide the necessary housing.

To date, he added, the government has shown no visible signs of recognizing the true scope of the problem.

Frank Oberle (PC-Prince George-Peace River) gave Mr. Basford credit for recognizing housing needs but said the government has failed to communicate the details of its programs and services to those most in need.

Andrew Brewin (NDP-Toronto Greenwood) called for renewed emphasis on rehabilitation of rundown housing and greater use of co-operatives to help solve accommodation shortages.

Andras Explains UIC Figures

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Mnister Robert Andras found himself under pressure again Monday to explain a series of charges against manpower-centre operations.

Quoting statistics in the House of Commons to back his claim that no widespread injustices have resulted from the recent crackdown on unemployment insurance cheaters, he said only 12 per cent of those who appealed the loss of benefits in the Toronto-Hamilton area during January and February won their cases.

He was unable to explain reports placing the figure as high as 50 per cent but speculated that they may have involved those disqualified for not looking for work as required and reinstated without an appeal after renewing their search.

Recycle Project Nets 6½ Tons of Newspaper

About 6½ tons of newspapers were collected at the municipal yard Saturday, Oak Bay municipal engineer Geoffrey White told council Monday night.

Bundled newspapers for recycling will be received there every Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Last Saturday was the first collection.

Council received a request that bottles and cans also be collected at the yard.

Ald. Douglas McLelland warned that a good deal of sorting would be necessary if these were added and suggested that, should this be done, a system might be set up where the municipal staff on duty could be assisted by volunteers.

Council's B Committee will consider the proposal.

The council approved recommendations from the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee that up to $450 be given the French Weeklies Newspapers of Canada for a reception at its annual convention in Victoria, $2,000 be given for the Victoria School's summer recreation program, and $1,000 be given to the Summer Smile Show. All grants would be shared on the usual intermunicipal formula, under which Oak Bay pays 11.57 per cent.

The Victor School grant was approved, providing that the school tries to become a member of the Community Chest in 1974.

The council decided to wait until Mayor Frances Elford returned from her vacation in Florida before ruling on a recommendation to the GVIC from the Community Council of Greater Victoria that a Charitable Appeals Review Board be set up. (Mrs. Elford had voted against this at the GVIC meeting).

Ald. Brian Smith said, "highly professional hard-sell" outfits had been raising money for "highly reputable charities" but "siphoning most of it out of the community."

In other business the council:

—Approved an application from the Victorian Days Society to hold its annual bikathon through Oak Bay April 15.

—Approved an application from the Children's International Summer Villages to hold a walkathon through Oak Bay April 7.

—Approved calling for tenders for two new police cars.

—Agreed to submit a resolution to the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities that the provincial government pay to municipalities an annual grant in lieu of taxes for services to university buildings in their areas.

HEARINGS CALLED FOR ZONING BIDS

Oak Bay council will hold a public hearing at 7:45 p.m. Monday, April 2, on four zoning bylaws.

The first bylaw will set out definitions of boarding houses and boarders.

The second will rezone five properties on the Esplanade back from apartment to single-family dwelling, this is being done at the request of the owners.

The next bylaw will stiffen building requirements for apartments in the areas on the north side of Cadboro Bay from Florence (except the Magnet Hardware) to Bowker and on the south side of Cadboro Bay from Cranmore (except the gas station) to Oak Bay Manor. The new regulations will require buildings of non-combustible material, limited to a height of 30 feet; 35-feet side setbacks and adequate parking.

The last bylaw will rezone 723 St. Patrick (next to Casey's store) back from retail to single-family dwelling.

Stupich Urges Jail For Cattle Rustlers

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich says he's concerned about the lack of jail sentences for persons convicted of cattle rustling.

The minister said cattle rustlers seem to be getting away with a mere pat on the back of the hand. He said there should be a more serious recognition of the nature of the crime than now is the case.

Stupich said he intends to bring the matter to the attention of the attorney-general's department.

More than 400 cattle were reported stolen in B.C. last year but not one person convicted of rustling was given a jail sentence.

Guides Want Debris Cleared

BURNS LAKE (CP) — About 65 British Columbia hunting guides and outfitters have called on B.C. Hydro to clear debris and deadheads blocking parts of Williston Lake.

The deadheads were left when the W. A. C. Bennett dam flooded thousands of miles of the Peace, Parsnip and Finlay River valleys to create the lake.

The conference also passed resolutions calling for a ban on hunting within a half-mile of public highways and agreed for an increase in basic hunting fees to $25 for residents.

Policeman's Demotion Upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal has upheld the board of police commissioners in their demotion of Constable John G. L. Whitelaw for misconduct.

His demotion to second class constable followed a disturbance in Vancouver's Gastown district Aug. 7, 1971, when police asked demonstrators to disperse.

Convicted Guard Killer Appeals

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyer for convicted prison guard killer Garry John McNamara, sentenced to hang April 10 for the murder of an Alexis Creek guard said he will appeal his conviction to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Lawyer Robert Rothinson of Kamloops said he will be seeking a stay of execution because appeal procedures could take several months.

Award Winner to Stand Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — Carl Agin, once convicted then acquitted of murdering the baby of his common-law wife and the recipient of an award for bravery in rescuing a child from a burning house, was committed for trial Monday on charges arising from a series of apartment break-ins.

Agin appeared in North Vancouver provincial court and waived preliminary hearing on four charges of breaking and entering with intent to commit theft and one charge of breaking and entering and theft. He elected trial by judge and jury.

Pedestrian Shot with Pellet

VANCOUVER (CP) — David Paul Gore, 22, who shot a pedestrian with a pellet gun, was fined $500 and placed on a year's probation Monday after he pleaded guilty to a charge of criminal negligence. Charges of illegal possession and unlawful use of a weapon were stayed by the crown.

CUPE Wants Aides Under Pact

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees want aides hired under a Local Initiatives Project by the North Vancouver school district tobe subject to the union's collective agreement. The union Monday protested a ruling that 23 aides are not covered by the contract.

Realtors Elect Charman

Eric Charman has been elected to a second term as president of the Victoria Real Estate Board.

Norman Ross was elected vice president.

Directors are Pyers Bailey, Herbert Brown, Donald Fraser, Noel Martin, Derrek Rayner, Per Sivertsen, Donald Tregear, Don Whyte, Murray Blannin and Archie Greene.

Charman said the board's new computerized listing service, combined with lowered commission rates, has resulted in substantial increase in the business done through the multiple listing service.

February sales, value through MLS was $5,886,100 in February, compared with $2,665,315 for the same month a year ago.

The January-February figure this year was $9,632,125 compared to $4,827,850 in 1972.

The computerized system produces a new book of listins each week.

Charman said property owners have recognized the getter servbice available in the improved system and are using it more.

GOVERNMENT COST UP EIGHT-FOLD

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of running the federal government has increased eight-fold from 1942 to 1972 and the number of federal employees has more than tripled, the Commons was advised Monday.

There were 83,781 federal public servants in 1942 compared to 273,537 in 1972.

It cost $1.85 billion to run the government in 1942 and $14.84 billion in 1972.

The figures were provided by Herb Breau (L-Gloucester), parliamentary secretary for trade, in response to a writtten question from John Reynolds (PC-Burnaby-Richmond-Delta).

Battle Near Saigon

Times News Services

SAIGON—A fierce and bloody battle between North and South Vietnamese troops appeared to be raging today at Tong Le Chan base camp 50 miles north of Saigon.

South Vietnamese government spokesman Lt.-Col. Le Trung Hien said the situation at the besieged camp was "critical" and that no aid had reached the 500 rangers trapped in the outpost.

Huen said earlier the South Vietnamese would have to stage a counterattack to relieve the battered troops if the peacekeeping force did not take some action.

Hien said 12 rangers have been killed and 61 wounded since the Communists surrounded the base last week. Except for a few wounded who were evacuated early in the attack, most of the injured men are still in the camp.

HEAVY FIRE

South Vietnamese medical helicopters have not been able to evacuate the wounded because of heavy ground fire.

Hien said the situation was not as serious at Rach Bap, a militia base about 30 miles closer to Saigon. About 100 South Vietnamese are also surrounded there. The attack at Rach Bap, which started the same time as the move against Tong Le Chan, has left eight dead and 18 wounded, including the company commander.

An international observer team was unable to investigate allegations of sieges at the two camps today because it could not get clearance from Viet Cong representatives.

Sources from the International Commission of Control and Supervision said an ICCS team at Bien Hoa outside Saigon received orders by courier today to investigate reports of fighting around Tong Le Chan and Rach Bap.

NO CLEARANCE

But regional representatives of the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government had not given clearance for an investigation in territory around the camps held by PRG forces, they said.

"We are hoping clearance will be given tomorrow," one ICCS official said.

Meanwhile, the fourth and final series of Vietnamese prisoner exchanges got under way today with 1,200 Communist Po Ws scheduled to be released in exchange for 309 South Vietnamese soldiers.

This final phase of the Po Ws exchanges is to be completed by Sunday.

Whitney-Griffiths with a dead sheep

Dogs Decimate Flock

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

When William Whitney-Griffiths woke up Monday morning he was the owner of one dying sheep. The rest of his flock was dead.

Blood-stained mutilated carcasses lay scattered about his farm — two on the lower pasture, four behind the house, one in the barn. Two others had been shot and buried.

There's one left. She's in the barn — dried blood spattered on her wool, refusing to eat and due to lamb in two weeks. Whitney-Griffiths says she probably won't make it.

Whitney-Griffiths, 87, has been raising sheep on his 25-acre Metchosin farm for 60 years. He's seen the dismembered limbs and ripped throats before.

Dogs marauding at night have taken about 60 of his sheep in the past. But this time he might be beaten.

"After 60 years of sheep all I've got is the one in the barn. I've got one sheep left and she'll die. I was so proud of them. And after all these years, they cleaned me out.

"They were all due to lamb in two weeks. We only just trimmed their eyes yesterday so they'd be able to see better. They got at them last night or early this morning."

Whitney-Griffiths' 12-year-old grandson, Gordon, discovered the dead sheep on his way to school.

"My daughter-in-law told me in the house here. She came in, closed the door and said 'you'd better sit down. I've got some bad news.'

"I just couldn't believe it."

He stood up, walked over to the whiskey, and took a couple of good stiff belts.

Apart from Whitney-Griffiths' old farmhouse, there are two cottages on the farm.

"That old ewe in the barn there . . . she goes to each cottage every day and they feed her. I don't think she'll last."

Nobody saw or heard the dogs.

"These were supposed to have been, from the marks we found, two big dogs and a little one. One gets the rear end and another takes the head. Once they've got 'em down they just go at the throat and rip it out.

"But they're just killing for killing. It's not as if they're starving."

Whitney-Griffiths says each sheep would have sold for about $75. A lamb would sell for $30 to $40. He would have had 15 to 20 lambs in early April.

It'd cost "easily $750" to start a new flock.

"I don't want to quit. The son will carry on. I don't know how much longer I'll last with a few more shocks like this.

U.K. Keeps Control Of Ulster

Times News Services

LONDON — The British government announced today official proposals for the future of Northern Ireland in which Ulster will remain part of the United Kingdom and the Roman Catholic minority will be guaranteed full civil rights.

Northern Ireland is also to get a new 80-member legislative assembly. Elections will be held as soon as possible.

The plan was announced under intense security precautions in a long-awaited white paper setting out the government's plans for restoring peace to violence-ridden Ulster.

The new assembly to be elected will replace the old (Protestant-dominated) parliament at Stormont suspended a year ago when Britain imposed direct rule. Elections will be by proportional representation.

Northern Ireland's link with Britain will be retained as long as the majority of its 1.5 million population wishes, the paper said.

This means in effect that there would be no pushing of the Protestant majority into involuntary union with the Republic.

TO RETAIN POWER

Ultimate power over legislation for Northern Ireland will remain with the British Parliament, the white paper said.

A secretary of state for Northern Ireland will continue to hold a seat in the British cabinet and to exercise executive responsibility for law and order.

William Whitelaw, 52, has held this job for the past year.

After the election, the British government proposes to hold a conference between representatives of Northern Ireland and the Irish republic.

It indicates a recognition that the Irish republic has a legitimate interest in the affairs of the northern counties.

"The proposals are unacceptable and we shall now set about making them unworkable," said William Craig, chairman of the Ulster Loyalist Council.

Brian Faulkner, leader of the Unionist Party and last Northern Ireland prime minister, said, "there can be no snap judgment until the paper has been studied. But I welcome the decision making coming back to the people where it belongs.

"The IRA is not interested in any paper solution whether it is white, green, or orange," Faulkner said.

There was no advance notice of the publication date. This was to foil any attempt at terrorist bomb attacks.

In anticipation of the publication of the white paper, Belfast grocers reported a run on their packaged food stocks, saying people feared an explosion of violence might close stores.

British commanders sent reinforcements into the streets and doubled troop strength at some posts along the so-called "peace line" separating Belfast's Protestant and Catholic neighborhoods.

An army spokesman reported seven shooting incidents in the province over the past 24 hours, five of them between troops and gunmen.

Still, they said, the violence apparently has eased considerably since the weekend.

THE 'FORGOTTEN SICKNESS'

"Alcoholism is the forgotten sickness — the very real problem in our society today," says Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace says: "Alcoholism must be recognized as a medical problem and it far exceeds in gravity narcotic drug addiction."

And Cathy Perkins, director Victoria branch, B.C. Alcoholism Foundation says the rate of alcoholism in people over 20 years of age has increased by 50 per cent in the past 10 years.

"We must have a plan to tell them what is happening to them and what will happen if they don't break the pattern," she said.

Starting in today's Times on Page 19 is the first of a four article series on alcoholism by Victoria writer Pat Murphy.

The series gives a picture of the vast social and economic costs rung up by the age-old problem of alcohol addiction and also raises the point that conversely, society has not yet resolved its debt to the alcoholic — mainly to recognize the affliction as illness and take steps to help the individual alcoholic make his or her adjustment to life.

DOLLAR REGAINS STRENGTH

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The U.S. dollar regained strength late today after sagging in early trading on the newly reopened European money markets.

Trading generally was light and uncertain as speculators and heavy investors studied the new situation stemming from reforms, including a float of most major currencies, created during the markets' 17 days of closures.

On most markets, the dollar opened today at prices lower than its strong performance on Monday, the first day of official trading since March 2. But as the day wore on, prices inched back to the Monday levels.

ITT Admits Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — A company official confirmed today that International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. tried to get U.S. government action to threaten President Salvadore Allende with economic collapse in Chile.

"He had stolen our property without compensation or they had said they were going to," William R. Merriam, ITT vice-president explained to a Senate foreign relations subcommittee.

Merriam testified that ITT sought to apply pressure in 1971 through the White House office of presidential adviser Dr. Henry A. Kissinger and the state department to suspend U.S. foreign aid to Chile, deny International Bank loans and apply other economic sanctions.

The objective, he said, was to get the government of Chile to pay for expropriated property, which in the case of ITT involved the Chile Telephone Co.

Merriam said his company made the objective explicit to the state department 25 times but "they didn't do it."

He acknowledged that a memorandum from a company official making 18 suggestions for U.S. government action represented the company's desire. "If Allende was faced with economic collapse he might be more agreeable to pay for expropriated property," Merriam explained.

He acknowledged that he, as head of ITT's Washington office in 1970-71, headed an ad hoc committee of other multinational corporation Washington representatives with similar objectives in Chile. The other companies he identified as Anaconda and Kennecott Copper, W. R. Grace, Kaiser Chemical and Ralston Purina.

Merriam testified that he exchanged information on the political situation in Chile in 1970 with the head of the Central Intelligence Agency's Latin American section.

$3.5M Paid In Mercury Poisoning

KUMAMOTO, Japan (AP) — The Kumamoto district court today ordered the Chisso chemical firm to pay $3.54 million to the families of 67 persons who died after eating fish contaminated by pollutants the company had dumped.

Another 259 persons who were affected but didn't die are expected to sue for damages.

The company's president said earlier that Chisso would accept the court's judgment and would not appeal.

The court said mercurious wastes from the company's plant flowed into Minamoto Bay and persons who ate the contaminated fish suffered a form of mercury poisoning known as Minamoto Disease. The symptoms include paralysis of the limbs, impairment of speech and hearing and disorders of the nervous system.

The awards ranged from $49,000 to $168,000.

U.S. Banks Must Explain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government has summoned six of the nation's largest banks to appear here Thursday and explain their raising of interest rates for prime business loans

Led by the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York, the banks announced increases in the prime interest rate Monday from 6¼ to 6¾. Past increases have normally been in increments of ⅛ or ¼ point.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and also head of the committee on interest and dividends, which is part of the government's wage-price control system, quickly challenged the increases, saying it was not clear they complied with government criteria set last month.

Burns asked the banks to bring information on their costs and interest rate policies, particularly with regard to loans to small business firms, home buyers and consummers.

Iran Takes Oil

TEHRAN (AP) — Iran formally took over from foreign operators today the country's multi-billion-dollar oil industry.

Kuwait Incident

KUWAIT (UPI) — Iraqui troops attacked and seized one Kuwaiti border post and shelled another today in what Arab observers called the worst such incident between the two countries since Kuwait gained its independence in 1961.

Block Removed

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (UPI) — Leaders of the American Indian Movement formally requested a recall of their tribal chief Monday, a major development that could help resolve the three-week armed occupation of this tiny hamlet on the sprawling Pine Ridge Indian reservation.

Candidates Quit

ANKARA (UPI) — The two main candidates in Turkey's presidential election withdrew from the race today leaving the way open for an extension of President Cevdet Sunay's term or two years.

New Panama Treaty

PANAMA (AP) — The United States told the UN Security Council today it is ready to conclude promptly a new treaty on the Panama Canal Zone.

3 Feet of Water Covers Streets

MONTREAL (CP) — A state of emergency was declared Monday night in Lachenaie, a community just north of Montreal, after the bordering Milles Iles River overflowed, causing severe flooding.

Lachenaie Mayor Edouard Sarrazen said the state of emergency was called after consultation with his administration.

"The ice shifted after supper and the water rose quickly," he said. "If it shifts again things will get worse."

Civil protection crews were sent in to help and "already people are being evacuated by truck because the water is too deep for them to use their cars," he said.

The mayor said he has requested help from the Canadian Armed Forces in evacuating residents to a high school where emergency accomodations have been set up.

A Quebec Provincial Police office said many streets were covered with as much as three feet of water.

In Ontario almost 4,000 acres of prime farmland 25 miles southwest of Chatham remained submerged today after water poured through a 45-foot gap in the Baptiste Creek dike system in weekend flooding.

As brisk winds continued on Lake Erie, fears were expressed that considerable damage might be caused on Pelee Island, off Essex County.

Prof. Paul Vandall, geography specialist at the University of Windsor, described the island's position as precarious. It has 300 permanent residents.

Meanwhile, the federal government and Ontario governments have discussed aid to thousands of flood victims along Lakes St. Clair, Erie and Ottawa.

'EXOTIC-TYPE' GUNS FACE BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang Monday said the semi-automatic M-1 carbine and possibly other "quasi-machine guns" as well as the "more exotic types of firearms" soon might be banned.

The M-1 is the weapon which killed a shopper here in a weekend robbery.

Lang said in an interview he had asked department officials to investigate all weapons to determine which should be restricted or prohibited. But he said that he was not prepared to recommend restrictions on rifles and shotguns.

"The advantages that would be gained by requiring registration of shotguns or rifles used for hunting purposes would be outweighed by the disadvantages," he said. "The result could be that innocent citizens would find themselves violating the law."

Make Your Own Rolls!

LONDON (AP) — Any multimillionaire who wants go one better than his neighbor gets his chance next week. Instead of buying just another Rolls-Royce, he could buy the entire company and make his own.

Rolls-Royce Motors is up for sale.

The prospectus of the company which claims to build the world's best motor car will be published next week by London merchant banker N. N. Rothschild who will then invite bids, signed and sealed, from interested parties.

The giant Rolls-Royce aerospace and automobile empire crashed into virtual bankruptcy in 1971, broken by a massive fixed price contract to build engines for America's Lockheed TriStar Airliner.

The British government rescued the military and aerospace divisions from the ruins by nationalizing them into a new company called Rolls-Royce Ltd.

The automobile and diesel engine divisions carried on working under the managership of an official receiver, on whose behalf Rothschild is staging its auction.

Last year Rolls-Royce Motors made a profit of about $7.5 million at current exchange rates, with an output of some 2,800 cars and a turnover of $125 million.

Rothschild is putting a reserve price on its prestige-laden package. Business experts are predicting the price may be as much as $100 million.

But there is a snag.

Foreign bidders are not exactly being blocked. But the legal standing of the thoroughly British Rolls-Royce marque prevents the name itself being used by any foreign company.

There would appear to be little attraction to the foreign corporate millionaire in having a garage full of Rolls-Royces when he had to call them something else.

Chinatown Can Be Saved

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

The days of Victoria's Chinatown are numbered, according to University of Victoria geographer Dr. Chuen-Yan Lai, but the area can still be rescued.

The two chief menaces to Chinatown's survival are redevelopment projects nearby and the willingness of the dwindling number of Chinese property owners to sell out, Lai says.

At the same time, unlike Chinatowns in other Canadian cities, Victoria's has not yet deteriorated beyond rescue.

Over-all rehabilitation of the area, which is running down, "would accomplish the goal of creating a viable historic identity," Lai says in Residential and Neighborhood Studies in Victoria, a new university publication.

Lai says a study of Chinatowns in North America found that the minimum conditions for the survival of a Chinatown are: a city population of 50,000 or more, a diversified economy, and a Chinese population of 250 or more in the area where the Chinatown exists.

"If these requirements are valid, the days of Victoria's Chinatown are numbered, because its population is decreasing and its economic activities are rather limited," Lai says.

"The chief menace to its continued existence is its situation between the Inner Harbor renewal area and the two vacant city blocks which are owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and will soon be developed," Lai says.

(A city planning official said the CPR now owns one city block in the area; bounded by Discovery, Chatham, Government and Store. No plans for development of the lot have been submitted to the city.)

However, if these projects go ahead, land values in the three main Chinatown blocks will rise considerably and owners will be tempted to sell out, Lai says.

The three main Chinatown blocks are bounded by Store, Pandora, Fisgard, Douglas and Herald.

"Although Chinese, who seem to be apathetic, still own about 70 per cent of the properties in Chinatown, they will likely sell them to the highest bidders and will retain less and less control over its destiny," Lai says.

The main reasons for the decline of Chinatown, according to Lai, are the assimilation of young Chinese into Canadian culture and the death of old residents.

"Old Chinatowns which are usually situated in the core or on the fringe of downtown commercial areas, have high land values but are unattractive to the increasingly middle-class Chinese residents," Lai says.

The chief value of Victoria's Chinatown is not in Fisgard Street itself, Lai says, "but in what is behind its shop facades: the old, brick buildings and intricate networks of picturesque, narrow alleys and arcades."

"This hidden section of Chinatown, unknown to the public, is looked upon by the Chinese as a socio-psychological well to which they can return and refresh themselves."

Today the population in Chinatown is down to only 587, according to census figures quoted by Lai, and approximately 75 per cent of the population is Chinese.

THE SPRING EQUINOX was at 10:13 a.m. today, and little girls' minds swing to romping among daffodils, nuzzling up to new-born lambs and other spring-like rites. Dawn and Christy, 22-month-old twins of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Mehain of Williams Lake, celebrate spring's arrival by a gambol in Beacon Hill Park. They're here to visit their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Haines.

44% Increase In Budget For Region

Capital Regional District directors today began consideration of a 1973 budget of $2,545,996, up 44.1 per cent over the previous annual budget.

The 1972 annual budget was $1,766,153, but directors were told the probable expenditure last year was $1,870,037.

Major expenditures this year are (1972 budget figures in brackets):

—Sewer debt charges, $609,146 ($230,000).

—Regional parks, $390,356 ($345,000).

—Legislative and general government, $292,700 ($194,550).

—Juan de Fuca Ice Arena and recreational complex, $239,291 ($206,858).

—Municipal Finance Authority debt service, $237,457 ($132,734).

—Planning services, $231,800 ($160,700).

A move to increase the annual stipend of the chairman to $4,500 from $2,000 was referred to the executive committee after Victoria Ald. Tom Christie said it should be looked into.

WORK LOAD INCREASING

Board chairman Jim Campbell foresaw two to three days work a week for this year and Sooke director Howard Elder said, "certainly the chairman's workload is increasing."

Project Recycle, the volunteer organization now taken over by the regional district, came under close scrutiny with a budgeted expenditure of $21,000.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said the project has 'turned into a monster' the volunteers have taken off."

He said it is time directors looked at the feasibility of continuing Project Recycle because it is losing money.

The region's executive director, Dennis Young, said a report is being prepared on the feasibility of recycling and the report will be ready by the end of the month.

Campbell said directors can decide on continuing or discontinuing Project Recycle in the next few months after the feasibility report is received.

TAKING OVER as new executive director at Victoria General Hospital is Jim Fair, 39, former director of diagnostic services at Vancouver General Hospital.

Nuns Still There

Three dissident nuns continued their sit-in at St. Mary's Priory today, claiming they have been denied a chance to continue their work among the elderly ill.

For the third night in a row the sisters, from the Society for the Love of Jesus, slept Monday night in sleeping bags on the floor of a basement dining room.

They were locked last Thursday from the Priory house where they have lived for about 20 years, the latest outbreak in a long-standing dispute with another faction for control of the small order and its assets, estimated at $1.5 million and land and securities.

But the three entered the house from the rear, despite security guards, and have refused to budge since. Most of the house is locked to them and now both sides have security guards.

★

The three — Sisters Mary Agnes Eaton, Mary Josephine Donvan and Mary Lucy Ford — are supported by Mother Mary Cecilia, founder of the order and head of it for 40 years.

Heading the other faction is Sister Leonette Hoesing, whom the dissidents say is not legally the mother prioress because she was improperly elected two years ago with invalid proxy votes.

Sister Mary Agnes Eaton said today the dissidents have in the past been repeatedly denied a chance by sister Leonette to continue their work in the order.

"We would gladly work if it was given to us . . . she would rather hire people from outside than give work to us."

A 71-bed extended care hospital is situated on the priory grounds and St. Anthony's Home for senior citizens is directly across the road.

Sister Leonette declined today to make further comment in the dispute.

Injured Seaman In Hospital

A seaman aboard the Liberian freighter Asteri who was hurled against the ship's superstructure in Sunday's storm, has been taken to the merchant seamen's Hanna Clinic in Vancouver.

A spokesman at the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre in CFB Esquimalt said today it was not necessary to airlift 42-year-old Georgio Birris, since the ship had contacted a Vancouver doctor by radiotelephone, who had prescribed treatment for the man. The ship was 700 miles at sea.

It was first thought the seaman was suffering from a ruptured kidney but by assessing the symptoms given him the doctor was able to diagnose that Birris is suffering from a broken rib over the kidney.

The Asteri docked at Vancouver just before noon today.

Oak Bay to Go Ahead On Centre Without Vote

Oak Bay council will go ahead with plans for its $1.6 million recreation complex without going to the ratepayers with a referendum.

Council, with one exception, voted Monday night to apply for the $766,667 loan under the federal government's winter capital projects fund without first calling for a referendum.

Ald. Brian Smith noted that it was not necessary for the deputy minister of municipal affairs to receive unanimous approval for bypassing of the referendum to approve the loan. He said if the deputy minister received an indication of "strong" support by council this was all that was necessary.

Ald. John Goult was the only one to oppose the move.

After stating that he was convinced that this was the time to build a centre and that a "happy financial arrangement" coupled with the need for the centre made the timing opportune, Goult said:

"Council's proposal, in my opinion, should be placed before the electorate. It (a referendum on borrowing large sums of money) is basic to democracy. The referendum is well entrenched in our law."

He said he was convinced that a referendum "would be substantially passed if explained. What then is the fear of going to the electorate?"

He said the figure of $50,000 a month quoted as being lost if work was not carried out between December and May was exaggerated.

Both Smith and Ald. Douglas McLelland said that to keep within the $1.6 million estimate it might be necessary to build only the ice rink and swimming pool, leaving out the curling park and parking facility for 125 cars.

McLelland, a member of the special recreation committee, said that from now on all meetings of the committee will be open to both press and the public.

He said he realized the "great pressure on all people on fixed incomes" but said that, a centre being "totally essential," this was the best opportunity for people on fixed incomes to get one and pay low taxes.

Smith noted "referendums at this time of year are not well attended and usually a small number decide for the rest."

Apart from the loan, the centre will be financed with a $333,333 provincial grant and $500,000 in federal government "forgiveness" for on-site labor.

McLelland suggested that a development competition be held with teams of contractors and designers bidding for the job. He said this would help in setting cost limits and cut down on time.

Council agreed to consider this type of competition, providing it met with the approval of the provincial and federal governments.

Later in the meeting, council received a letter from A. C. Chatten, of 2232 Windsor, enclosing a cheque for $100 as his contribution to the costs of the working drawings for the centre.

Smith observed, "This is a most generous donation. It's good to see that he sees fit to put his money where his mouth is."

Acute Nurse Shortage

Victoria's two major acute care hospitals have reported an "unusually high" shortage of nurses for this time of year.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital has about 30 vacancies for registered and practical nurses, the Victoria General about 16 or 17 vacancies, said spokemen for the two hospitals.

"If it's beginning to show up so much now, what's going to happen in the summer?" asked Royal Jubilee nursing director Elizabeth Moore.

Nursing shortages usually become more serious in summer months when many nurses go on holidays, take courses, ask for transfers or stay home with children out of school.

Plans are under way to hold a spring refresher course for nurses in Victoria, said a spokesman for the Registered Nurses Association of British Columbia, but financing of the course hasn't been determined.

The association says the nurse shortage is province-wide. In January there were 172 nursing vacancies in B.C., compared with 114 last year and 40 the year before.

A "Come to B.C." ad has been placed in the national Canadian Nurse magazine and an eastern daily newspaper.

CONSTRUCTION DELAYED ON NEW REC CENTRE

Work will start April 15 on the $1.3 million recreation centre on Mount Newton Crossroad in Central Saanich.

A spokesman for Western Recreational Resources Ltd. said today a start has been delayed by wet weather and incomplete engineering drawings.

He said the land-use contract signed with the municipality allows for a reasonable extension of the Aug. 31 completion date.

Concern over the delay was expressed at a council meeting Monday night.

Western Recreational is composed of private businessmen, mostly Saanich Peninsula residents.

Alex Izaat, who has represented the company in negotiations with council, has been temporarily sidelined by ill health. He did confirm however, that there is no financial holdup.

The contract is planned to contain a 15-metre swimming pool, a full-sized skating rink and a sheet of curling ice.

Man Fined $500 In Arson Case

A 50-year-old Victoria man was fined $500 and placed on 18 months probation in Victoria provincial court today for setting fire to his former fiance's garage.

Patrick Howard Charles Tripp, 4052 Cedar Hill Crossroad, pleaded guilty Feb. 26 to setting fire to the garage at 920 Darwin.

He told investigating Saanich detectives that he had set the Feb. 4 fire to show the woman she "needed him around to protect her."

Judge William Ostler termed the man's actions an "astonishing case" and considered the accused "emotionally immature." The judge said however, he was impressed by character evidence submitted by one of Tripp's neighbors and by his employer.

Ostler decided in favor of a fine and term of probation although he said the case came "close to the line" for a jail sentence.

Teachers' Time Off Under Fire

The abundance of holidays for school children caused by recent labor problems had Greater Victoria school board trustees Monday debating whether teachers should hold training seminars on their own time.

Discussion was sparked by a letter to the board from Frank Boddy, 310 Clifton, who lamented the fact that children lost another day of instruction Friday, Feb. 23, because of a teachers' convention.

The children, he said, have been "deprived of education facilities for three weeks due to labor troubles."

"As a taxpayer of this school district I would like to ask if it is possible to have teachers hold their meetings on days which do not conflict with teaching days," the letter said.

Trustee Walter Donald agreed with Boddy's argument. He referred to a seminar on social studies planned for this week which will take yet another hour of instruction time.

"At the risk of driving morale down to the ground, I have to admit, I was thrilled to receive Boddy's letter," said Donald.

"I don't begrudge teachers their hour. But this year we have been beset by time off for teachers. During the strike there was plenty of time for training seminars.

"I'm sure it's getting to the parents — time off for this and that. Boddy should get some response."

Trustee Hal Knight wondered about scheduling the seminars during the Christmas holidays.

Trustee William Ross argued that the teachers didn't have time for seminars during the strike.

"It's not true they had time. They were very busy."

Asked to explain the regulations, Superintendent A. J. Longmore said that out of a 200-day school year, seven days are allowed for these types of seminars.

He said he has instructed teachers that because of recent time lost, the social studies seminar will be the last such scheduled activity to be held within school hours, that does not include parent-teacher interviews, however, he said.

The board instructed that a reply be sent to Boddy and a copy be sent to the Greater Victoria Teachers Association.

Commenting on the discussion, GVTA president Bob Mitchell said today the complaints were "a lot of nonsense.

"If there were a lot of them (seminars) it might be a different situation," he said. "But people don't realize how many (seminars meetings) take place on weekends already. When one's scheduled for during the week, it's usually because we can't fit it in on weekends.

"I know the strike posed a problem as far as time lost . . . but in most cases teachers are making their own arrangements to cover time lost during labor problems."

He suggested it is just as important for teachers to concentrate on the quality of the learning experience which is being upgraded by the seminars, as it is to concentrate on the quantity of time spent teaching.

ONTARIO LAND BILL

TORONTO (CP) — Major new programs in land-use and law reform were promised today by the provincial government at the opening of the third session of the 29th Ontario legislature.

In the 21-page speech from the throne, read by Lt.-Gov. W. Ross Macdonald, the government promised legislation to ensure that good farmland is retained for agriculture, to preserve the Niagara escarpment, expand activity in forest management including regeneration of cut-over lands, and for a 75-mile-long parkway green belt from Dundas, near Hamilton, to Oshawa on the east.

The speech also pledged reforms of the Ontario Municipal Board, Ontario Hydro and the courts, including abolition of the grand-jury system and a proposal to permit legal clerks to prosecute minor traffic offences.

Troops Pour South

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today that all the information he could glean on his trip to Southeast Asia "tends to confirm" that thousands of North Vietnamese troops have infiltrated the South.

He told the Commons this is one reason that Canada wants the supervisory commission to work in such a way that this can be determined as a matter of fact. But the commission, of which Canada is a member, had not been asked to observe, or given permission to observe, the reported infiltration.

Meanwhile, a fierce and bloody battle between North and South Vietnamese troops appeared to be raging today at Tong Le Chan base camp 50 miles north of Saigon.

South Vietnamese government spokesman Lt.-Col. Le Trung Hien said the situation at the besieged camp was "critical" and that no aid had reached the 500 rangers trapped in the outpost.

Hien said earlier the South Vietnamese would have to stage a counterattack to relieve the battered troops if the peacekeeping force did not take some action.

Hien said 12 rangers have been killed and 61 wounded since the Communists surrounded the base last week. Except for a few wounded who were evacuated early in the attack, most of the injured men are still in the camp.

South Vietnamese medical helicopters have not been able to evacuate the wounded because of heavy ground fire.

Hien said the situation was not as serious at Rach Bap, a militia base about 30 miles closer to Saigon. About 100 South Vietnamese are also surrounded there. The attack at Rach Bap, which started the same time as the move against Tong Le Chan, has left eight dead and 18 wounded, including the company commander.

An international observer team was unable to investigate allegations of sieges at the two camps today because it could not get clearance from Viet Cong representatives.

Sources from the International Commission of Control and Supervision said an ICCS team at Bien Hoa outside Saigon received orders by courier today to investigate reports of fighting around Tong Le Chan and Rach Bap.

Whitney-Griffiths with a dead sheep

Dogs Decimate Flock

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

When William Whitney-Griffiths woke up Monday morning he was the owner of one dying sheep. The rest of his flock was dead.

Blood-stained mutilated carcasses lay scattered about his farm — two on the lower pasture, four behind the house, one in the barn. Two others had been shot and buried.

There's one left. She's in the barn — dried blood spattered on her wool, refusing to eat and due to lamb in two weeks. Whitney-Griffiths says she probably won't make it.

Whitney-Griffiths, 87, has been raising sheep on his 25-acre Metchosin farm for 60 years. He's seen the dismembered limbs and ripped throats before.

Dogs marauding at night have taken about 60 of his sheep in the past. But this time he might be beaten.

"After 60 years of sheep all I've got is the one in the barn. I've got one sheep left and she'll die. I was so proud of them. And after all these years, they cleaned me out.

"They were all due to lamb in two weeks. We only just trimmed their eyes yesterday so they'd be able to see better. They got at them last night or early this morning."

Whitney-Griffiths' 12-year-old grandson, Gordon, discovered the dead sheep on his way to school.

"My daughter-in-law told me in the house here. She came in, closed the door and said 'you'd better sit down. I've got some bad news.'

"I just couldn't believe it."

He stood up, walked over to the whiskey, and took a couple of good stiff belts.

Apart from Whitney-Griffiths' old farmhouse, there are two cottages on the farm.

"That old ewe in the barn there . . . she goes to each cottage every day and they feed her. I don't think she'll last."

Nobody saw or heard the dogs.

"These were supposed to have been, from the marks we found, two big dogs and a little one. One gets the rear end and another takes the head. Once they've got 'em down they just go at the throat and rip it out.

"But they're just killing for killing. It's not as if they're starving."

Whitney-Griffiths says each sheep would have sold for about $75. A lamb would sell for $30 to $40. He would have had 15 to 20 lambs in early April.

It'd cost "easily $750" to start a new flock.

"I don't want to quit. The son will carry on. I don't know how much longer I'll last with a few more shocks like this.

U.K. Keeps Control Of Ulster

Times News Services

LONDON — The British government announced today official proposals for the future of Northern Ireland in which Ulster will remain part of the United Kingdom and the Roman Catholic minority will be guaranteed full civil rights.

Northern Ireland is also to get a new 80-member legislative assembly. Elections will be held as soon as possible.

The plan was announced under intense security precautions in a long-awaited white paper setting out the government's plans for restoring peace to violence-ridden Ulster.

The new assembly to be elected will replace the old (Protestant-dominated) parliament at Stormont suspended a year ago when Britain imposed direct rule. Elections will be by proportional representation.

Northern Ireland's link with Britain will be retained as long as the majority of its 1.5 million population wishes, the paper said.

This means in effect that there would be no pushing of the Protestant majority into involuntary union with the Republic.

TO RETAIN POWER

Ultimate power over legislation for Northern Ireland will remain with the British Parliament, the white paper said.

A secretary of state for Northern Ireland will continue to hold a seat in the British cabinet and to exercise executive responsibility for law and order.

William Whitelaw, 52, has held this job for the past year.

After the election, the British government proposes to hold a conference between representatives of Northern Ireland and the Irish republic.

It indicates a recognition that the Irish republic has a legitimate interest in the affairs of the northern counties.

"The proposals are unacceptable and we shall now set about making them unworkable," said William Craig, chairman of the Ulster Loyalist Council.

Brian Faulkner, leader of the Unionist Party and last Northern Ireland prime minister, said, "there can be no snap judgment until the paper has been studied. But I welcome the decision-making coming back to the people where it belongs.

"The IRA is not interested in any paper solution whether it is white, green, or orange," Faulkner said.

There was no advance notice of the publication date. This was to foil any attempt at terrorist bomb attacks.

In anticipation of the publication of the white paper, Belfast grocers reported a run on their packaged food stocks, saying people feared an explosion of violence might close stores.

British commanders sent reinforcements into the streets and doubled troop strength at some posts along the so-called "peace line" separating Belfast's Protestant and Catholic neighborhoods.

An army spokesman reported seven shooting incidents in the province over the past 24 hours, five of them between troops and gunmen.

Still, they said, the violence apparently has eased considerably since the weekend.

THE 'FORGOTTEN SICKNESS'

"Alcoholism is the forgotten sickness — the very real problem in our society today," says Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace says: "Alcoholism must be recognized as a medical problem and it far exceeds in gravity narcotic drug addiction."

And Cathy Perkins, director Victoria branch, B.C. Alcoholism Foundation says the rate of alcoholism in people over 20 years of age has increased by 50 per cent in the past 10 years.

"We must have a plan to tell them what is happening to them and what will happen if they don't break the pattern," she said.

Starting in today's Times on Page 19 is the first of a four-article series on alcoholism by Victoria writer Pat Murphy.

The series gives a picture of the vast social and economic costs rung up by the age-old problem of alcohol addiction and also raises the point that conversely, society has not yet resolved its debt to the alcoholic — mainly to recognize the affliction as illness and take steps to help the individual alcoholic make his or her adjustment to life.

GOVERNMENT COST UP EIGHT-FOLD

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of running the federal government has increased eight-fold from 1942 to 1972 and the number of federal employees has more than tripled, the Commons was advised Monday.

There were 83,781 federal public servants in 1942 compared to 273,537 in 1972.

It cost $1.85 billion to run the government in 1942 and $14.84 billion in 1972.

The figures were provided by Herb Breau (L-Gloucester), parliamentary secretary for trade, in response to a written question from John Reynolds (PC-Burnaby-Richmond-Delta).

ITT Admits Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — A company official confirmed today that International Telephone and Telegraph Co. tried to get U.S. government action to threaten President Salvadore Allende with economic collapse in Chile.

"He had stolen our property without compensation or they had said they were going to," William R. Merriam, ITT vice-president explained to a Senate foreign relations subcommittee.

Merriam testified that ITT sought to apply pressure in 1971 through the White House office of presidential advisor Dr. Henry A. Kissinger and the state department to suspend U.S. foreign aid to Chile, deny International Bank loans and apply other economic sanctions.

The objective, he said, was to get the government of Chile to pay for expropriated property, which in the case of ITT involved the Chile Telephone Co.

Merriam said his company made the objective explicit to the state department 25 times but "they didn't do it."

He acknowledged that a memorandum from a company official making 14 suggestions for U.S. government action represented the company's desire. "If Allende was faced with economic collapse he might be more agreeable to pay for expropriated property," Merriam explained.

$3.5M Paid In Mercury Poisoning

KUMAMOTO, Japan (AP) — The Kumamoto district court today ordered the Chisso chemical firm to pay $3.54 million to the families of 67 persons who died after eating fish contaminated by pollutants the company had dumped.

Another 259 persons who were affected but didn't die are expected to sue for damages.

The company's president said earlier that Chisso would accept the court's judgment and would not appeal.

The court said mercurious wastes from the company's plant flowed into Minamoto Bay and persons who ate the contaminated fish suffered a form of mercury poisoning known as Minamoto Disease. The symptoms include paralysis of the limbs, impairment of speech and hearing and disorders of the nervous system.

The awards ranged from $49,000 to $168,000.

U.S. Banks Must Explain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government has summoned six of the nation's largest banks to appear here Thursday and explain their raising of interest rates for prime business loans.

Led by the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York, the banks announced increases in the prime interest rate Monday from 6¼ to 6¾. Past increases have normally been in increments of ⅛ or ¼ point.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and also head of the committee on interest and dividends, which is part of the government's wage-price control system, quickly challenged the increases, saying it was not clear they complied with government criteria set last month.

Burns asked the banks to bring information on their costs and interest rate policies, particularly with regard to loans to small business firms, home buyers and consummers.

PANAMA (AP) — The United States told the UN Security Council today it is ready to conclude promptly a new treaty on the Panama Canal Zone.

3 Feet of Water Covers Streets

MONTREAL (CP) — A state of emergency was declared Monday night in Lachenaie, a community just north of Montreal, after the bordering Milles Iles River overflowed, causing severe flooding.

Lachenaie Mayor Edouard Sarrazen said the state of emergency was called after consultation with his administration.

"The ice shifted after supper and the water rose quickly," he said. "If it shifts again things will get worse."

Civil protection crews were sent in to help and "already people are being evacuated by truck because the water is too deep for them to use their cars," he said.

The mayor said he has requested help from the Canadian Armed Forces in evacuating residents to a high school where emergency accomodations have been set up.

A Quebec Provincial Police office said many streets were covered with as much as three feet of water.

In Ontario almost 4,000 acres of prime farmland 25 miles southwest of Chatham remained submerged today after water poured through a 45-foot gap in the Baptiste Creek dike system in weekend flooding.

As brisk winds continued on Lake Erie, fears were expressed that considerable damage might be caused on Pelee Island, off Essex County.

Prof. Paul Vandall, geography specialist at the University of Windsor, described the island's position as precarious. It has 300 permanent residents.

Meanwhile, the federal government and Ontario governments have discussed aid to thousands of flood victims along Lakes St. Clair, Erie and Ottawa.

'EXOTIC-TYPE' GUNS FACE BAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang Monday said the semi-automatic M-1 carbine and possibly other "quasi-machine guns" as well as the "more exotic types of firearms" soon might be banned.

The M-1 is the weapon which killed a shopper here in a weekend robbery.

Lang said in an interview he had asked department officials to investigate all weapons to determine which should be restricted or prohibited. But he said that he was not prepared to recommend restrictions on rifles and shotguns.

"The advantages that would be gained by requiring registration of shotguns or rifles used for hunting purposes would be outweighed by the disadvantages," he said. "The result could be that innocent citizens would find themselves violating the law."

Make Your Own Rolls!

LONDON (AP) — Any multimillionaire who wants go one better than his neighbor gets his chance next week. Instead of buying just another Rolls-Royce, he could buy the entire company and make his own.

Rolls-Royce Motors is up for sale.

The prospectus of the company which claims to build the world's best motor car will be published next week by London merchant banker N. N. Rothschild who will then invite bids, signed and sealed, from interested parties.

The giant Rolls-Royce aerospace and automobile empire crashed into virtual bankruptcy in 1971, broken by a massive fixed price contract to build engines for America's Lockheed TriStar Airliner.

The British government rescued the military and aerospace divisions from the ruins by nationalizing them into a new company called Rolls-Royce Ltd.

The automobile and diesel engine divisions carried on working under the managership of an official receiver, on whose behalf Rothschild is staging its auction.

Last year Rolls-Royce Motors made a profit of about $7.5 million at current exchange rates, with an output of some 2,800 cars and a turnover of $125 million.

Rothschild is putting a reserve price on its prestige-laden package. Business experts are predicting the price may be as much as $100 million.

But there is a snag.

Foreign bidders are not exactly being blocked. But the legal standing of the thoroughly British Rolls-Royce marque prevents the name itself being used by any foreign company.

There would appear to be little attraction to the foreign corporate millionaire in having a garage full of Rolls-Royces when he had to call them something else.

Phillips Leads Bill 42 Filibuster

By BRIAN BUTTERS and PAUL MOSS

Don Phillips (SC—South Peace) added another hour and a half to his continuing speech on Bill 42 in the legislature Monday as debate on the controversial land control legislation was renewed.

Phillips spoke for more than five hours when the bill was discussed last Tuesday. His Monday contribution pushed the total to 6½ hours. Through house rules, he continues to hold the floor and will continue his speech the next time the government allows debate on the bill to continue.

When Phillips adjourned the debate minutes before the Monday closing time of 6 p.m., Premier Barrett indicated to the house that the legislation will be discussed again today.

Phillips has said he has material for several more hours of speaking. A colleague, Bob McClelland (SC—Langley), plans to follow Phillips in the debate and says he has at least five hours of material.

Phillips took aim Monday at Premier Barrett, accusing the premier of "misleading the people of B.C." by making conflicting statements on the intent of Bill 42.

The Socred said Barrett had told an open-line audience last Friday that aspects of the Land Commission legislation are similar to those contained in the Municipal Act.

"He was not telling all the facts," Phillips said.

"The premier wants to become an octopus with its tentacles in every community in the province and into the taxpayers' pockets as well," he said to heavy Socred applause.

Phillips referred to the 1970 debate in the legislature over the Socreds' proposed Land Act, which was passed later in that session. He said Barrett — then leader of the Opposition — had pushed for the government to put the legislation to committee for study.

And now, Phillips said, Barrett is not willing to do the same thing with the Land Commission legislation — put it to committee and take into account public opinion on the subject.

"Somewhere along the line, this is a two-faced policy," he said. Barrett was guilty of perpetrating a "sham" or a "farce," he said, either in 1970 or during the debate on this year's legislation.

Speaker Gordon Dowding forced Phillips to withdraw the last remarks.

The Socred made reference to a campaign advertisement describing Barrett as "a man you can trust."

"I make the prediction that the people will never trust him again," Phillips said.

POOR PR

Phillips said Barrett had admitted on the radio that the government did a poor job of introducing and explaining the bill, yet he had ignored the opportunity to do that when hundreds of farmers demonstrated outside the Legislative Buildings last week.

"Why didn't the premier do his public relations job then?" he said.

He noted that Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich had already "retreated" from his original position, by promising four basic amendments to the bill when he "soft-shoed through the bull sale in Kamloops on Bill 42" last week.

The legislation can't be amended in any substantial way, Phillips said, urging instead a "broad new approach."

He said the government should "take Bill 42 to the public," by holding hearings and getting a broad range of views.

"With just a little more humility and respect this government could salvage its position and accomplish the aim everyone wants — to save farm land and the farmer," he said.

Phillips was rebuked several times by Speaker Gordon Dowding, as he had been in the earlier debate, for being tedious, repetitious and not confining his comments to the principle of the bill.

During much of Phillips' speech the house was more than half-empty, the attendance falling to as low as 14 MLAs for certain periods.

Scott Wallace (CP—Oak Bay) also raised the issue of Barrett's statements on Bill 42 over the weekend.

CRUCIAL ASPECT

Wallace rose during Monday's question period and asked if Barrett could elaborate on statements he made comparing Bill 42 to the Municipal Act.

After receiving an evasive answer from Barrett, Wallace made comments outside the house.

He said he takes "strong exception to such a crucial aspect of Bill 42 being misrepresented in public."

He said the comparison of the two pieces of legislation by Barrett was "not what you would expect from the leader of the province."

"I am saying he made a mistake and that he possibly was not aware of the provisions of the Municipal Act which I referred to," Wallace said.

EX-TORY LEADER HIRED BY GOV'T

Resources Minister Bob Williams Monday confirmed that former B.C. Progressive Conservative leader John DeWolf is being retained by the provincial government.

Answering a question on the order paper from Ed Smith (SC — North Peace), Williams said DeWolf has been hired by the government as an "economic consultant."

Williams added that DeWolf is "not on salary."

Forest Industry Balks at Penalty

The forest industry's dissatisfaction with streambank protection guidelines was expressed Monday to the legislature's forestry and fisheries committee.

B.C. Council of Forest Industries president Gordon Draeseke told the committee the forest industry does not like the idea that it and the B.C. Forest Service have to pay costs of streambank protection. The costs should be borne instead by the beneficiaries of the protection, he said, be they the federal or provincial government or any of their departments.

Draeseke also released a brief the council has given to chief forester Ian Cameron, who explained the new guidelines to the committee last week. The brief held that the guidelines are being enforced too stringently, which will result in an artificial increase in lumber costs and the inability of the industry to achieve an increased annual cut of timber.

Enforcement of the guidelines, Draeseke said, will lead to "a prohibitive increase" in both operating and capital costs.

"If the logging industry has to absorb the costs, they will only perform with reluctance. There will be continual argument and controversy, and the attitude will be to do the bare minimum rather than to co-operate wholeheartedly."

Draeseke said protection of streambanks could conceivably cost the forest industry $5 million in a specific area, and result in a benefit of only a few hundred dollars.

"We don't think that this is reasonable or right," he said.

"If someone wants an expensive thing done for them, they should be prepared to pay for it."

Committee member Harold Steves said there would be no threat to streams at all if logging was not carried out in nearby areas.

"If that's what you want to do, you'd be shutting down the forest industry for the sake of a few fish," Draeseke said.

The forest industry presentation also complained about lack of co-ordination between various government agencies in the administration of forest management. Draeseke said the industry has been given conflicting advice from different areas of government on how to go about logging.

Blanket guidelines are not the answer to the problem of protection of streambanks, Draeseke said. On-the-spot decisions by wildlife biologists, by conservation officers and by loggers themselves have to be relied upon to result in good forest management along with adequate protection of bodies of water and fish.

The industry's brief to the committee recommended that no single all-embracing solution for streambank protection be legislated.

Government resource agencies should undertake complete inventories of all streams and their relative values and research should be carried out to determine the importance of streambank vegetation to stream environment.

The brief also recommends that staff of the forest service be used to administer forest management policies. The staff must be adequately trained "to ensure a balanced consideration of all values," it said.

Holiday Treatment Costs Less

PORT HOPE, Ont. (CP) — It would be cheaper for the Ontario government to send patients suffering from nervous exhaustion or hypertension on a paid vacation for two weeks to the Bahamas or Spain than to put them in hospital for the same period of time, says hospital board chairman H. S. Milne.

In his annual report to the Port Hope and District Hospital trust Mr. Milne said Thursday that since Sept. 30, 1972, the average gross cost for standard ward care patients for all public hospitals in Ontario was $54.94 a day. For two weeks this would amount to nearly $770.
